Hey babe,
 How is life in the fast lane. Can you believe that we are finally going to be out of this shit hole. It was great getting to know you. I don't care about the rumors and what I've said. I have enjoyed having to you as a friend. Hope that you have all great summer. Go for all those goals if you try hard enough you can

September 8th

The Day Summer Stood Still

As the days of summer seemed to pass more and more quickly, everyone was dreading September 8th. This would be the day we left our fun to go through another nine long months of reports, tests, and of course finals.

As all of the new and old faces passed by, we started to feel that this was not as bad as we had thought.

The incoming seniors had to worry about upcoming SAT tests, and tough psychology tests. The juniors were happy to finally be upperclassmen. The sophomores had little to look forward to, and the freshmen had to worry about everything.

As we traveled from class to class meeting our new teachers and receiving a five pound book from each, the reality of studying and homework began to hit us. Our backpacks were completely filled by the time lunch came around.

Lunch was a complete fiasco. The lines were more like a mob and the snack bar was serving about a quarter of the items on the menu. Those who were fortunate enough to make it to the front of the line, found that the cafeteria food had actually improved. Having no break made the food even better. Although the food was edible, most students missed going to McDonald's or Burger King for lunch. The freshmen felt right at home having to stay on campus during lunch. As the noon period dragged on, one began to wonder when lunchtime would end. Finally, as the bell rang, nobody wanted it to end. Sixth period through eighth period were tough for those with the extended day. Many of the students involved in sports and other activities stayed late into the day practicing and planning for their special interests.

By the end of the day, we remembered the warm days lying on the beach. We remembered staying out until midnight on Monday night. All of this was gone. It was back to getting up at the crack of dawn to face a new routine, rainy day at Pioneer High School.

What do you miss most about summer?

"Going to the beach every day." Tracy Stratinsky

"Sleeping in." Susan Glowacki

"Jammin'" Erik Zapata

"Eating and partying all day long!" Marcie Jaimes

California Dreamin'

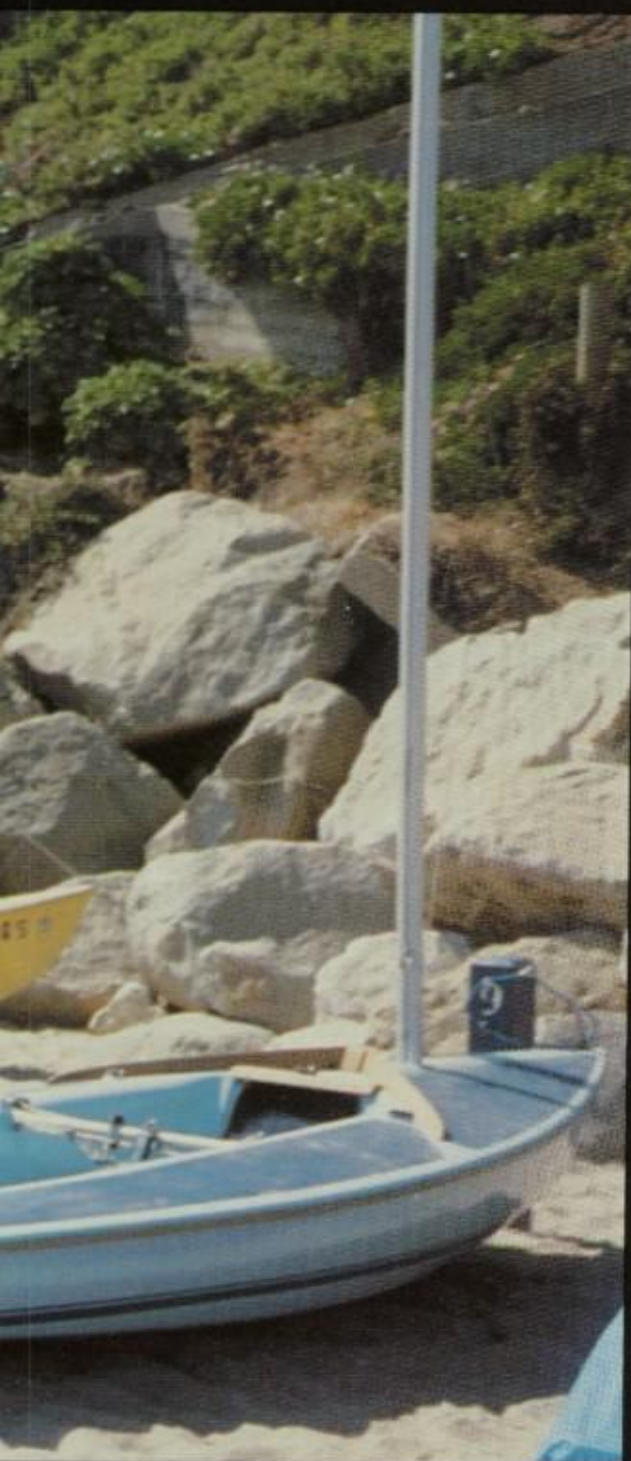

Sun Worshipers

At 6 A.M. the alarm goes off. Blaring Beach Boys music fills the room as a snoring bundle still lies beneath the covers of the bed. The snoring stops as slowly but surely, a weary hand, connected to the bundle, gropes for the snooze button. A peaceful quiet falls over the room and the bundle begins to snore again. It is only to be interrupted five minutes later by another outburst of "Surfin' U.S.A.". The bundle, which is really a guy, finally gathers all of his available willpower and forces himself to get out of bed. He stumbles out from under the blissfully warm sheets and heads for the closet. There, he absent-mindedly picks an outfit but then realizes that it is too cold for Bermuda shorts and a surfer T-shirt. With a sigh, he pulls on jeans and a sweatshirt. During breakfast, he almost falls asleep in his cornflakes. Finally, he makes it into his car and eventually gets to school two seconds before the bell. During his first period honors English class, the teacher's voice seems to be drowning out and the words in his copy of Othello seem to blur. His eyelids slowly close as he drifts off into a "California Dream." His dream begins ...

Quickly he pulls into the parking lot knowing that just beyond the sand dunes crisp, peeling waves are awaiting an aggressive thrill seeker. He carefully removes his board from the roof of his woody and grabs a bar of wax out of the front seat. A quick dash up the sand dunes, and it's off to paradise. But wait, he has forgotten the very important wetsuit. He gingerly sets his board at the top of the dunes and darts back down to the car. After getting the wetsuit he makes another mad dash up the dunes, grabs his board, and runs down the other side towards the awaiting waves. His first sight of the lineup is a beautiful six foot glassy set with tubes big enough to drive a truck through. Running through the soft sand, tripping over driftwood, he remembers a day just like this in the summer of 1982 when he and four of his friends had an incredible session at Rincon that left them stoked for months. "Wow", he thought, "if this could only be half as good as that ...". Before he knows it, his wetsuit is on, his board is waxed, and he is ready to hit the surf. He waits for a lull in the sets, and he's off, running at first, then jumping onto his board and paddling as the shockingly cold water hits his head and rushes down the back of his suit.

Suddenly, out of the blue, a long (and very annoying) bell goes off and disrupts his awesome "California Dream" He happily thinks, "Oh well, it was rad while it lasted. Anyway, I'll be there again tonight and every night until summer rolls around again." He smiles to himself as he leaves his English class and returns to the real world. Until tonight ...

What a total trip!

Hi-ho, hi-ho, it's off to CAMP we go!

"Summer camp?! I thought camp was just for kids." That is untrue, as many Pioneer students discovered during the summer of 1986. Many students attended camps, such as journalism, yearbook, spirit, track, football, and volleyball camps. No matter which camp a student attended, the goals were the same-to learn while also having fun.

At the Bay Area Yearbook Seminar, although Suzie Miller, Ariadne Sarros, and Jenny Falkenhan had to attend classes on yearbook design, they also had time for fun. One of the days during their five day stay at the California Maritime Academy was spent at Marine World, in its new Vallejo location. While at Marine World, the girls saw all the animals perform, including the killer whales and the seals, and they saw the fantastic ski show, the best show of the day. After having attended classes all day Tuesday, the trip to Marine World on Wednesday was welcome change.

One of the advisors at yearbook camp was a "wanna-be teenager" named Dwight Purdy (a man left over from the 1960's). One morning Suzie and Ariadne woke up early and posted signs all over camp proclaiming that, "Dwight is a god!" Everyone in camp, except the Pioneer students and Dwight himself, thought that Dwight had made the signs, in an effort to attract attention to himself. When the last day of camp arrived, the mystery of who had put up the signs still had not been solved.

"Camp was a total blast and I learned a lot too."

-Ariadne Sarros-

No matter how good a camp is, there is always something bad about it, which at yearbook camp was the food. Every day the campers walked in to the cafeteria hoping to finally have decent food, only to be confronted with indistinguishable items with little or no taste. Most of the campers had to resort to calling the neighborhood Domino's at least once during their stay.

Many Pioneer students, including Becky Lorenz, Andy Woolley, Eric Falk, Joe Green, David Ritter, Stu Dong, Chris Fujii, and Mary Sprowl, attended track camp at Stanford University. Every morning was spent learning new stretching techniques and every afternoon was spent perfecting individual events. When not running, the Pioneer athletes spent their free time talking and playing games. One game they played was a variation of "Quarters" in which the beverage used was a mixture of Diet Coke and pickle juice. Yum, yum!! Becky Lorenz and Andy Woolley later said, "It was the most fun and the least sleep we've ever had in one week."

All of the camps that the Pioneer students attended during the summer of 1986 were a lot of fun and well worth the cost.

Left: During the course of a 2 ½ week trip to Hawaii, junior Jessica Kitazawa sees many interesting sights, including these windsurfers in Hookipa, Maui. Many people take advantage of the beautiful weather and warm water in the Hawaiian Islands to try the sport of windsurfing. When asked about her trip, Jessica commented, "It is truly paradise."

Left: Suzie Miller poses with the two graphic artists from Jostens at the Bay Area Yearbook Seminar. The graphic artists, Jon Moreno and Sandy Woo, gave the Pioneer students many great ideas for the 1986-87 yearbook. The statue the three are leaning against is located in the middle of the "quad" at the Maritime Academy in Northern California, where the seminar took place.

Whatever turns you on

One does not live on work alone...

Tick, tick, tick... 6 minutes, 42 seconds left. Why is it time goes by so slowly when I keep staring at my watch? Tick, tick, tick... 3 minutes, 57 seconds left. You know what they say—"A watched pot never boils!" Tick, tick, tick... One minute, 29 seconds left. A 55 minute period has never been this long! Tick, tick, tick... 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1...

Yeah, I made it! Made what? I've just made it through another excruciating week of school and to another weekend! Just think of it... a whole 2 days, 48 hours, 2880 minutes, or 172,800 seconds without having to hit the books. The thought of it is just too intense. Can I handle it? Heck yah! Once the bell rings, I'm off. Good thing there's no practice today. For once, the coach is letting us have a day off.

I run into the parking lot and jump into my car. I got someone to replace me at work tonight so that I could go to the dance, which is going to be rad! I get home and the phone rings. It's my friend who complains to me that she has nothing to wear to the dance, so I drive over to her place to lend her one of my shirts. Because of that, I have to rush back home to get ready for the dance. Darn, I'm never gonna be ready on time!

At 8:30 we arrive at Pioneer. Tons of people are already here and everyone is ready for a fun night. My friends and I immediately hit the dance floor. When a slow song comes on, the guy I've had my eye on finally asks me to dance and I am ecstatic! The night goes by too quickly and we're all danced out.

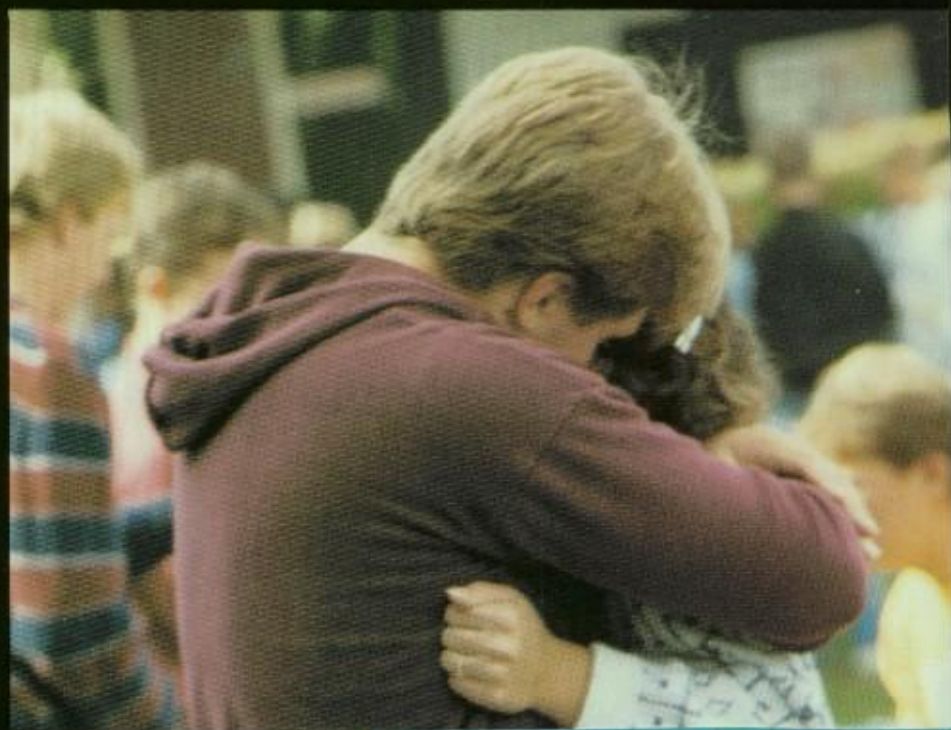

Saturday. Too bad I have to work! Oh well, there are hamburgers in McDonald's that are waiting to be made. It's a dirty job, but somebody's got to do it! After a hard day, I finally get off work at 5. Cool! There's a football game tonight. The stadium is packed and the crowd is ready for the game. It's freezing out there in the stands, but we don't mind. The crowd goes wild — Pioneer kills Homestead! Everyone goes for pizza to celebrate and the night goes on...

Sunday. I sleep in till noon and I'm still tired. I talk on the phone for a few hours with the T.V. on. Aaaaahhhh, what a life! After dinner, a cold realization finally hits me. I've still got homework to do! Why do I always do this to myself? After 2 hours and a valiant attempt to finish my assignments, I fall asleep with my face on pages 116 and 117 in my Calculus book. The weekend has just claimed another victim...

Hey KNADLER, How ya Doin sexy. Well this is it the last days of High School. I know you'll miss me right. YOU still owe me one. Maybe in Hawaii huh? I'm glad I met you because your a fun person to be with, well I wouldn't know would I. Where is my softball fan present huh? It's gonna be kill in Hawaii I can't wait. well gotta go. Love always Picture this: You are walking through the Quad when you see an amorphous figure; as you approach it, you realize that it is not just one being, but two beings entwined as one. You begin to wonder if what you're witnessing are Siamese twins. You search for the area where they are connected. You look cautiously, quietly, as not to be seen. As you search this asymmetrical figure, you're looking for that special bond, that connection, which determines the fate of life or death for the other being. Examining this figure close-up, you come to realize that these two are connected . . . THE LIPS!! To complete the scenario, freshmen surround the "Lego-couple" with mouths gaped and eyes staring with complete reverence. It's like, "Beam me up Scotty, it's Cling-On!"

You may be wondering what this episode is all about; it's an old term of the Fifties called (drum role please) P.D.A., Public Displays of Affection. We've all seen it and we've all gawked at it, but what do we really think about it?:

"It's cool if done in moderation, people who have to be separated with a blowtorch aren't cool." -Jim Harris

"We all have our own kinks, just some are a little kinkier than others." -Ivan Sanchez

Dare to be Noticed

Different Point Of View

Setting: Pioneer Quad
Characters: Mikal Arbotov, and Genady Rodesky
Mission: To find new fashion trends

Mikal Arbotov, and Genady Rodesky, newly arrived foreign exchange students from Russia, look in awe at the students in Pioneer's quad. Both boys have come here to America to experience the fast paced, westernized, culture that we teenage Americans live day after day.

Mikal's bushy eyebrows are raised high as he and his comrade, Genady, scam the quad for students arriving one by one for the beginning of a typical school day.

"Mikal! See that girlie with skirt that holds every curve of body?!? I never before have seen a turtleneck that has sleeves missing! Her hair in front of her face seems to be defying gravity, for they stick straight up in air! I wonder if her earlobes will sag to ground for those silver Cheerios look very heavy."

"I'm not certain comrade, but this young American beauhunk has his pant legs folded and rolled up? For what reason is he wearing no socks? Does his father not make enough for buying socks? Does he not know how to tie his shoestrings? His shirt has been torn by some animal, yet he still wears it. His chest is peeking out in the open public for everyone to see! Maybe that is why he wears the mirrors over his eyes so no one can know his identity. Is he spy?"

"No, Mikal! Don't be foolish! But you know I thought standard of living was better than that of Russia, but observe this boy. His clothes he wears are hand downs from members of family. His shirt is big enough to fit my Russian mother and his knees of his pants are no more. His jacket too, is made of material of blue jeans."

"Genady! This girlie here passing the tree, her skirt is of school colors and small as dust rag! I hope for herself that she does not bend over, for I would not like the thought of such a beautiful creature being put in jail for many years. Notice the boys standing by her? They wear colors of girls, is it not embarrassing wearing clothes of pink and yellow?"

"Witness this man, Mikal, with earring in ear! He walks with no worry of police picking him up?!? I wonder why hair on side of his head is missing? It is probably the punishment for the earring."

"Genady, the earmuffs here in America are very small and made of metal. But they are hooked up to small device. You think they are electric heaters? They must be hot for he keeps moving his head back and forth. Notice his hair is longer than hairs of my grandmother's legs!"

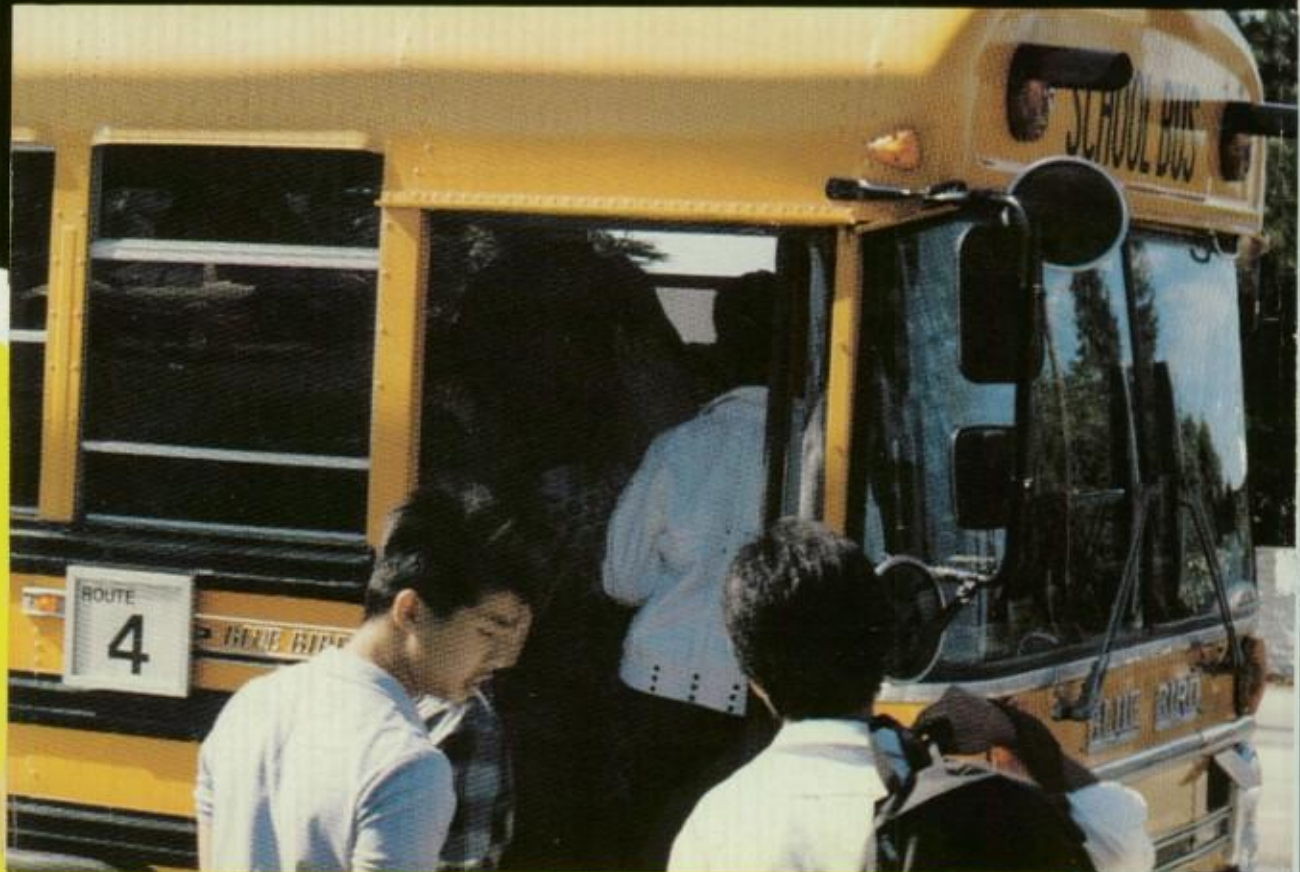

"Funny it is for this girlie has very short hair. Shorter than my pet wolverine, but the front of hair is longer and falls in eyes. It is many colors also Is she mourning? She wears all black, her dress, shoes, stockings, even lines under eyes are black. Looks like she works in coal mine."

"I must say Genady, the clothes here Americans wear are very different of those in Russia. They are free to wear what they wish and not be arrested for their choice of fashion. I think it is best for people to be themselves and dress differently. I enjoy this freedom they have, such a thing should be practiced everywhere."

I Need Wheels

Life's most embarrassing moments almost always seem to involve wheels. Wasn't it just last Friday that you and your frolicking freshmen friends had to be picked up at the dance by ... shhh ... Mom? How about last weekend when you wanted to take your "femme fatale" to the movies, and Dad dropped you off and picked you up? What a romantic date- with Dad watching your every move in the rearview mirror. The list could go on and on but everyone has experienced the need for wheels.

However, to be perfectly honest, all problems are not solved by the acquisition of a car. A person's first car is often one of the following: a) Mom's old car b) Dad's old car c) older sibling's old car d) stranger's old car or e) car which was passed from a stranger to mom, to Dad, to older sibling, and then to you! (YUCK!)

Even old and ugly is beautiful when the alternative is zilch. Cars are expensive, gas-guzzling, allowance-grabbing, monsters. But to all teenagers, wheels are wonderful.

This year I think that the busing was very bad. When you take the bus home, you don't get there until five o'clock! I have to take the city bus home because I have to work. If I were to take the school bus home, I wouldn't make it in time to change and be at work by four-thirty.

- Kalley Wade

I think Pioneer is a good school. The problem is the transportation. I have to leave at six-thirty to catch the bus. We pick up other kids and by the time I get to school, I am already tired. On the way home I do my homework. By the time I get home, it's four-forty.

- Nini Maldonado

Getting to school with your own car has got to be the only way!

- Jeff Zaro

It's really frustrating having to depend on other people to take you around when you don't have a car of your own.

- Ariadne Sarros

The 1986 Academic Decathlon, at Mission College in San Jose, was held on Saturday, November 15. The team members, Justin DuBois, Pat Lin, Sunil Bhopale, Brian Grove, Albert Kao, Regina Jones, Vincent Robinson, Mike Stallings, and Erik Exton, competed in various subjects for over twelve hours. The team members were accompanied by their coaches, Mrs. Burrows, Mr. Stark, and Mrs. Pflughaupt, who had taught the members in the different categories.

The Academic Decathlon is a competition held once a year in

The team was required to be made up of two A students, two B students, and two C students. In addition, three alternates were on the team; one from each category.

From the beginning of the school year until November 14, the team prepared for the Decathlon. The humanities class at school every day, the meetings during lunches, and the Monday night meetings at Mrs. Burrows' house proved the Decathletes determination. Not only were there group meetings, but the individuals were required to do individual reading and hours of study.

Academic Decathlon

which high schools from Gilroy to Palo Alto compete against each other academically. The team members take a series of ten tests about different subjects, such as language and literature, composition, interview ability, math, science, speech, fine arts, social science, economics, and a superquiz whose topic this year was the Constitution of the United States. Throughout the day, the points are accumulated from each of the tests.

The team consisted of nine juniors or seniors chosen by Mrs. Burrows.

The team did a fantastic job this year. Out of twenty-eight schools, Pioneer took fifth place. On top of that, they placed third in economics and the superquiz. This was an outstanding accomplishment. Last year's team took fourteenth place, and the previous best was sixth.

Both at the meetings and on the day of the competition, the team really had a lot of fun. They also felt it was a very rewarding experience. As Justin DuBois said, "Even though I was brain-dead after the exam, it was worth it in the long run."

Sweeney Todd, Demon Barber of the Barbary Coast killed his way to the stage on December 5th and 6th. Members of the cast and crew went through three-and-a-half grueling weeks of rigorous rehearsals, including the chaotic "hell week". The actors and actresses worked diligently on learning their lines and getting into the character they portrayed. Sweeney Todd, played by Erik Hoard, had over three hundred lines to memorize, but he did not let the other cast members down, he successfully learned all his lines.

The entire cast was "Fantastico!" said senior, David Townes. Each actor played his part very well. "It was an unforgettable treat! I felt as if I was at the scene of the crime."

The play was a great success. It sold out to an enthusiastic crowd in record time for both nights. Many viewers enjoyed the play so much on the opening night that they came back a second time.

The audience enthusiastically applauded and laughed at the jokes. The loud applause calmed the nervous cast members back stage and helped them

A killer is on the loose

Sweeney Todd, Demon Barber of the Barbary Coast was a play filled with excitement and intrigue. Sweeney Todd "polished" off customers that looked "prosperous" in his "special chair". His "customers" were sent to Mrs. Lovett, played by Colleen Odegaard. She made "delicious" meat pies from the fresh human flesh. These strange disappearances aroused the curiosity of the San Francisco community. Thus began the mystery of Sweeney Todd, Demon Barber of the Barbary Coast.

to relax and enjoy their roles.

The actors and actresses were essential, but there were other important people in the production of the play as well, namely the directors and the tech crew. The directors were Mr. Church, Kim Silva, Barry Dorf and Randy Hall. The technical crew did an especially good job with the special lighting.

The play, Sweeney Todd, Demon Barber of the Barbary Coast was "Great!" stated Dawn Difiore, a junior at Pioneer.

The United States is often compared to a melting pot because of its many different cultures and races that have been brought together in one country. However, sometimes the country more resembles a tossed salad rather than a melting pot. Although the different races are part of the same country, they usually keep to themselves, trying to preserve their individuality instead of interacting and combining, or "melting" their differences together. This past year, in the San Jose Unified School District, we experienced court ordered desegregation. Each individual experienced new ways of life, it did not quite work out as planned. Although some people did mix in with other groups, many either were too shy, felt that it was too difficult, or just plain did not want to meet new people from different areas. Thus, we were not melted together, but rather "tossed" into the situation.

Some efforts were made to try and change the situation. For instance, a speaker, Mr. John Alston, visited Pioneer to discuss some of the problems of racial differences and people stereotyping different groups of people. Also, some efforts school in the district was required to have a certain percentage of minority students attend their school. This was a new, different, and sometimes awkward situation for all the schools involved.

At Pioneer High, there were many good and bad feelings about the desegregation program. Some students from different areas wanted to become proud Mustangs, and others were forced to attend against their will. While the desegregation program was supposed to help "melt" the different races together, letting each individual were made to help make it easier for the desegregation students to join clubs and attend social events at the school, such as providing special bus transportation for dances.

Many people felt that the desegregation program was a good idea, but there were some complications that needed ironing out. However, the problems were diminishing towards the end of the year, and the people involved felt that the years to come would be better with eventual improvement.

Fashion Show

The atmosphere was filled with glitz, ritz, and glamour at the third annual fashion show, Puttin' on the Ritz, sponsored by the PTSA on Wednesday, March 4th. The combination of the enthusiasm of the models and the lively fashions in all the latest spring colors captured the audience's attention.

The models did a great job interacting with the audience. The models were representatives of each class. They were Mary Sprowl, Jennifer Lindsay, Jennifer Bayless, Jim Harris, Dan Nichols, Lynn Manley, Sheri Miller, Suzanne Blan-

Most of the models enjoyed being on stage. When asked about modeling, Mr. Shellman replied, "It wasn't as bad as I thought." He also said that he was glad the ordeal was over and that his daughter, Amy Shellman, had really enjoyed modeling. The student models seemed less nervous, probably because the audience was made up of their friends and relatives.

The fashion designs provided by Rothchild's, Casual Corners, Bill Gambles, and Pacific Fashions were in the latest in spring colors and styles. The selection

There were many important people who contributed to a successful newspaper. There were the roles of reporter, copy editor, page editor, photographer, and editor-in-chief.

One of the talented photographers on the Misprint staff, Casey Caston, has been on the staff since his sophomore year. When asked what his favorite type of picture to take was, Casey replied that he liked landscapes, partly because they don't move, and they don't blink their eyes. Aside from taking the easy way out, Casey also said that he liked taking sports photos.

The reporters made the paper. They rather write. "It takes a lot of time and creativity to create an interesting story, for the readers, because I, myself, hate to read a boring story."

Julie Luci also loved being on the Misprint staff. Julie liked writing the feature articles for the paper. "The Misprint is something I'm glad I signed up for, and I'm glad I got into, because it makes me a well-rounded person."

The editor-in-chief, the one that puts the whole shebang together, was Tanya Underwood. Tanya's job was to design the front page, to assign articles to help, to teach her staff, to train new people, and basically, to oversee the whole pa-were in charge of taking the assignments for stories, researching the assignment, interviewing (if necessary), writing the article, and proofreading it. Adam Schwenker, one of the gifted journalists on the newspaper staff, said, "I guess the best thing about being on Misprint, is taking enough pride in what I write, to be able to have other people read it."

Another inspirational writer that was added to the Misprint staff this year, was Doug Massa. Doug liked writing editorials the best because he got to share his own opinions. When asked if he'd rather be a photographer, etc. . . ., he said he'd Tanya enjoyed being editor because she liked the responsibility, helping out the school, and taking pride in the finished paper; but she also said that it's hard, telling your friends what to do, and sometimes it was difficult, because when things went wrong, she was blamed, because she was in charge.

Tanya said that "being editor is great. Although there's a lot of responsibility, you feel good about what's been accomplished. It's like being in a family, you're all striving for the same goal- to publish a great paper."

"This year's yearbook has to be wild, crazy, hip, cool, it has to be different!" This was a common saying among the members of the Equus staff. Now these people weren't just your ordinary, every day, run-of-the-mill teenagers. The majority of them were basically wild and crazy, so their goal of making a "non-generic" yearbook was not far out of reach. One probably wonders, now just how do you make a crazy yearbook? Well, it's an interesting story that goes a little something like this: First of all, a er. Okay, okay so this doesn't sound like all of the hard work it's cracked up to be, well hey! IT IS!!! Quite a few weekends were spent in good old Room 356, as well as long hours after school. The extra hours spend weren't all that bad though, especially not with crazy-lady Ariadne "Griego" Sarros as the fearless editor. Ariadne definitely had what it took to inspire the old members as well as "the rookies." ASB officers

Dear Student Body-

The year's end is the time to reflect on the past year, to enjoy our success, and to finally laugh at the many mistakes that were made. What better place to do it than in the yearbook?

The year had a shakey beginning with both closed campus and desegregation having been implemented in September. Desegregation was accepted as the year progressed. A survey of bus students showed a high level of involvement and comfort at Pioneer. As for closed campus, lunchtime's forty minutes posed the question: What are we going to do? Even scene was growing, the gym was bustling with activities. It was the place for buddies to go one on one, to watch buddies go one on one, or to just get out of the cold.

Perhaps even more exciting than having Dave Righetti head the Homecoming Parade, the ASB began a series of seminars, and the ASB started a lunchtime DJ program. Derick Evans provided the styles, others provided the tapes. Of course, everyone remembers the bumping that continually flowed from the cafeteria. There were a few discrepancies with the music, but the sound sys-that was answered successfully.

School was more than just classes and there was more to extra-curricular activities than just sports. The ASB officers began the year with the commitment to stressing involvement. Our first attempt and success, was the club faire (Sept. 17). During lunchtime, representatives from various clubs brought posters, prizes, and pictures to rally people into joining their respective organizations. The faire went even better than expected. New clubs were started and old ones grew; ski club, for example, had over 400 signups. From that point the club presidents were summoned by the ASB for information about assemblies, advisors, and activities, then a calendar was filled in with the complete scheduling of every club on campus.

Under the direction of Mr. Briscoe, Pioneer began its first intramural program. The first few months, as the club tem belongs to the school and in the years to come, the program can be ironed out.

Along with the successes came some failures or problems. TRASH. Sound familiar to the social science representatives?? It should. Quad garbage was a problem the entire first semester. We had posters, campaigns, meetings, and it still went on- (or down as the case may be)-What a way to remember the student council meetings!!

It was a great year, and now that it's finally over, we can reflect on all the events: lunchtime, desegregation, closed campus, and yes, even litter! Underclassmen, 1986-1987 was just one in four, but, for us it was the last. I wish you all the best of luck and I'll see you in 1997, at the reunion.

Nervously Freddy Freshman jumped out of his mother's station wagon, adjusted his Toughskin jeans and Garranimal T-shirt and quickly rushed off to join his fellow freshman friends at their first high school dance, the Welcome Back Dance. Once their hands were stamped and they were pushed into the gym by hundreds of shouting upperclassmen, they

Walking down to the field late in the afternoon, one would not only have seen football and soccer players practicing, but also a dedicated group of girls out there polishing, perfecting, and putting the finishing touches on their dance routines. Most students didn't realize how much time Pioneer's dance team spent practicing their routines. Their practices often lasted until 5:00 or 5:30 during the week plus there were many long hours to be spent practicing on weekends. Early morning practices were common-place during competition season. The small dance team practiced even more as they had to learn twice as many sides performing at most home games. They went to dance camp at UCSB during the summer, performed during halftime at a forty-niner's game, and competed at the California State Drill Team Competition as well as the USA National's Competition in Anaheim. These girls were a great bunch of hardworking, dedicated dancers, and they deserved every round of applause they received.

The cheerleaders were another inspirational group of girls. "That squad is so weird!" This was a common statement uttered about this year's varsity cheerleading squad. They did have some very original routines, words, and routines as the large team. Their practices took place after large's and it was not uncommon for them to arrive home well past dinnertime. Competition was a major part of a dance team member's life. There were 27 members on the team and only 20 spots to fill in the competition routine. Because of this, tryouts were held for girls to gain a spot in this routine. The Pioneer dance team has been steadily gaining statewide recognition during the past few years, and this year was no exception. Being on a squad such as the dance team took much hard work and dedication. This year these girls did many exciting things be-moves. Their zaniness made them fun to watch. How did the squad come up with some of their crazy creations? "Our squad would mostly goof-off at practice and we'd often come up with moves and words when we were just being stupid," said senior Jennifer Wilson. The cheerleaders said that the sometimes laid-back attitude with which they approached things actually made it easier to make up routines. It also kept people from getting on each other's nerves. The girls on the squad had a lot of fun and will always have fun memories of their "weird" squad.

Through their routines and game-action cheers, the song girls displayed the tremendous amount of

These cheerleaders practiced two to three hours each day on their routines to help cheer Pioneer to victory. Not only did they support frosh/soph activities, but they also attended all varsity activities. Their performances during lunch hour livened up the dreary closed campus atmosphere and helped to rally the spirit of the students for forthcoming games. Their smiles, friendliness, and overall attitudes gave Pioneer students a special pride in their school.

The frosh/soph cheerleaders helped to build the spirit of Pioneer High School. Their squad, consisting of thirteen girls; Carey Check, Danielle Jenkins, Tracie Biggs, Susan Glowacki, Tracy Stratinsky, Kelly Black, Tiffany Moore, Missy James, Suzanne Marsh, Zizi Ajiluni, Elisa Cooper, Cerina Lussier, and Alysén Andrade showed much spirit and support for the team members of all frosh/soph sports.

Spirit

Have you ever wondered how all those spirit squads you saw performing at games and rallies somehow miraculously came together and looked pretty good? Well, all the credit went to one really special lady. That lady was Jackie Buchser. Without her help and support, the spirit squads at Pioneer would have

The Homecoming Spirit Week was a week filled with fun and excitement that generated enormous amount of energy from the Pioneer students. The week of October thirteenth through the seventeenth was a great success in that it drummed up everyone's spirit for the great event, Homecoming.

Members of the senior, junior, sophomore, and freshman classes tried their best to win the prestigious title of "The Most Spirited Class of 1986-87".

The excitement-filled week started with the sock hop on Monday. Participating members of all four classes had to remove their shoes which were mixed up and tied in different bundles. The "air" of excitement was unbearable. The players were told to find their shoes, put them on, and run to the red rope in a snap and won the spaghetti contest. The sexy legs pageant was a lot of fun that drew a large crowd of girls to check out the sexy male legs on display. The guys showed off their muscular legs as the crowd cheered for their favorite pair. Senior, Chris Savoia, won this eye catching event by having the loudest applause for his muscular legs.

Gum search was the event on Thursday. The objective of this "search" was to do a nose dive into a pile of wrapped cream to find the missing gum. The first person to find the gum and chew it won.

Spirit week ended with a noon rally in the gym. Mr. Cesario tried out a new sound system while the finish line. The first team to reach the finish line with all their shoes on received 16 points; second place, 12 points; third place, 8 points; and 4 points, last.

Another event that took place on Monday was the test tube contest. A female member from each class had to lie on the cement ground in the quad while the male member tried to fill the test tube which was standing on her forehead. The first group to fill the test tube with water won. The participating ladies were very brave because they were not afraid of getting wet. The Juniors filled the tube in a flash.

The sophomore and juniors were tied for the first place, but the tie did not last for long. The juniors broke the tie by burping their way to victory in the refrigerator raid race and became the "Most Spirited Class of 1986-87". The sophomores came in second by a lead of 16 points over the third place holder, the seniors and the freshman came in last. It doesn't matter who placed where in the contest. It was the spirit and energy that counted. Everyone tried their best to make their respective class proud.

October 18, 1986 was the date of Pioneer's 27th annual Homecoming game and dance. During the half-time of the varsity game, a parade was held as part of the entertainment. The theme of the parade was "Pioneer Life." The parade included all kinds of floats, which included those made by the respective classes and various clubs, and the Homecoming court nominees.

Many classes and clubs got off to a bad start with the theme. Some wanted to have their float's theme displaying problems of closed campus, a new part of "Pioneer Life." But, the administration said that there were to be no negative floats. Consequently, many organizations ing Leland at our Homecoming two years ago- in 1984. Both the sophomores and freshmen created beach scenes, although they were very different from each other. The Booster Club made a great float with the theme, "Dissect da Chargers." This depicted a scene of surgery on a Leland football player.

The floats were judged by several active parents and administrators. The top three floats were announced and received awards. The seniors topped off their year by taking first place. The freshmen class got off to a great start by taking second place, and Senior Women took third.

Also included in the parade were the

had to change their plans. In the end, the guide-line set by the administration was for the best, because the floats showed our true Mustang spirit.

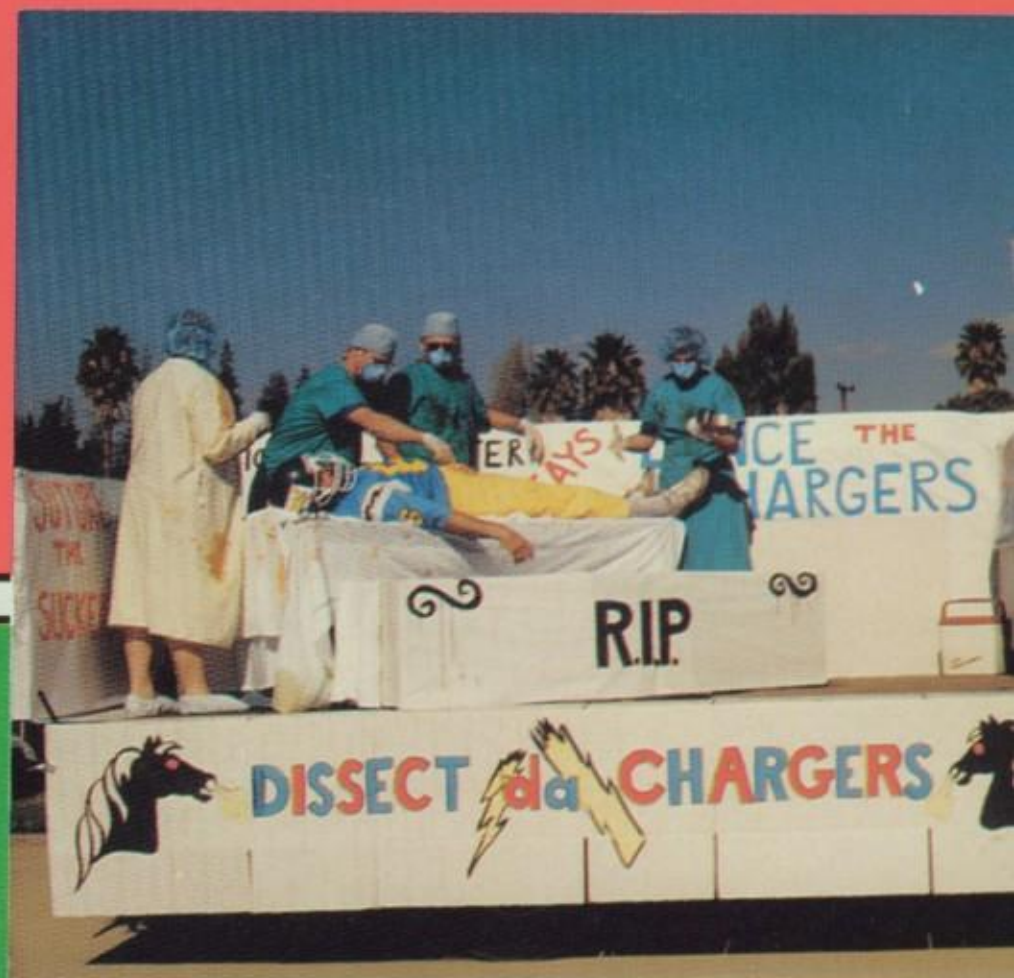

This year, there were many outstanding and spirited floats. The seniors made a scene portraying different aspects of a Senior year; such as the Senior Ball, Graduation, and the Hawaii trip. The always original and popular Key Club float was a scene from "Wheel of Fortune," with junior Jeff Farro as Vana White. Senior Women, a new club at Pioneer replacing the Keyette Club, decorated a Volkswagen Bus with glasses, a hat, and many spirited slogans. The juniors, spirited and optimistic, used a theme of "History Repeats Itself"-referring to defeat-

Court nominees. They were riding in beautiful convertible Mustangs.

Not only was Pioneer represented in the parade, but the neighboring Middle schools were, also. Castillero's spirit squad rode in an old fire engine and John Muir's spirit girls rode in a decorated truck.

Pioneer's 27th Homecoming parade was extra special this year. The Grand Marshall was the relief pitcher of the New York Yankees, Dave Righetti. Dave is an alumni of Pioneer; he graduated with the class of 1976. Dave played on the basketball team as well as on the baseball team.

Indeed, Pioneer Life was well portrayed in Homecoming 1986.

The frosh-soph team saw their hopes of a first place league title diminish as they lost a disappointing game 0-25. They played a strong first half, but were unable to score or maintain a strong defense the second half.

The Homecoming Dance

Left: Many students looked forward to the night of October 18, the night of Pioneer's 27th annual Homecoming Dance. When the big night finally arrived, they enjoyed themselves to the fullest!

"Oh no! It's 4:30, and I'm still in the bathtub. Archie is picking me up at 5:45, and I need at least three hours to get ready!"

Veronica Lodge jumps out of the bathtub, grabs a towel, her hairdryer, mousse, gel, hair-cream, toner, conditioner, vitamins, and an armful of other bottles, runs to her room, and slams the door. An hour later, she emerges. A sopping wet teenager has been transformed into a living beauty.

Archie Andrews, clad in Mustang football uniform, bursts through the door.

"Mom, did you pick up the courage? Did you iron my shirt? Did you get to the teller machine to get money? Did you wash my car and wax it up?" he yells as he heads for the shower. Archie, stripped of his uniform, jumps in the shower.

"Whoops! Too cold!"

She is a vibrant beauty, and they make the perfect couple. They exchange flowers, smile brightly for Mom and Dad, and leave for the dance.

Archie and Veronica rub their eyes in awe as they arrive at the dance. The Pioneer cafeteria has been magically transformed into a heavenly ballroom. (Well, almost!) They gape as they look at the silver streamers, and blue and white balloons which form an arch over the doorway. It is really a "True Blue" experience, which also happens to be the theme of the dance. As Archie and Veronica approach the entrance, their bid is taken and they each receive a small scroll with the details of the dance written on it as a keepsake. Finally, the big moment is here as they head for the dance floor. The rad music is provided by none other than KFOG, who plays a great variety of music from

A "true-blue" experience

"Oh great! I'll have a third degree burn, while I'm meeting her parents. Talk about the ultimate embarrassment!"

Fifteen minutes later . . .

Archie is set to go. Slicking back his hair, he puts on the finishing touches.

"There! A perfect ten! But, then again, what could you expect from a gorgeous guy like me?" he says to his reflection in the mirror.

Ding-Dong!

"Oh no!, He's here! Mom, get the door! I have to go to my room! I can't look too ready or nervous!"

Archie nervously awaits the opening of the door, which will symbolize the beginning of a wonderful evening, one filled with memories they can share with their grandchildren.

His train of thought is shattered as he witnesses Veronica descending the stairway.

classics to newer and racier tunes. Archie and Veronica both smile as they dance the night away. Every so often, they stop to get some refreshments (generously provided by the Pioneer Booster Club) and to socialize with their friends. Then, they line up to have their picture taken together. At last it is their turn and they hold their poses and they freeze their smiles.

"Say cheese," says the photographer.

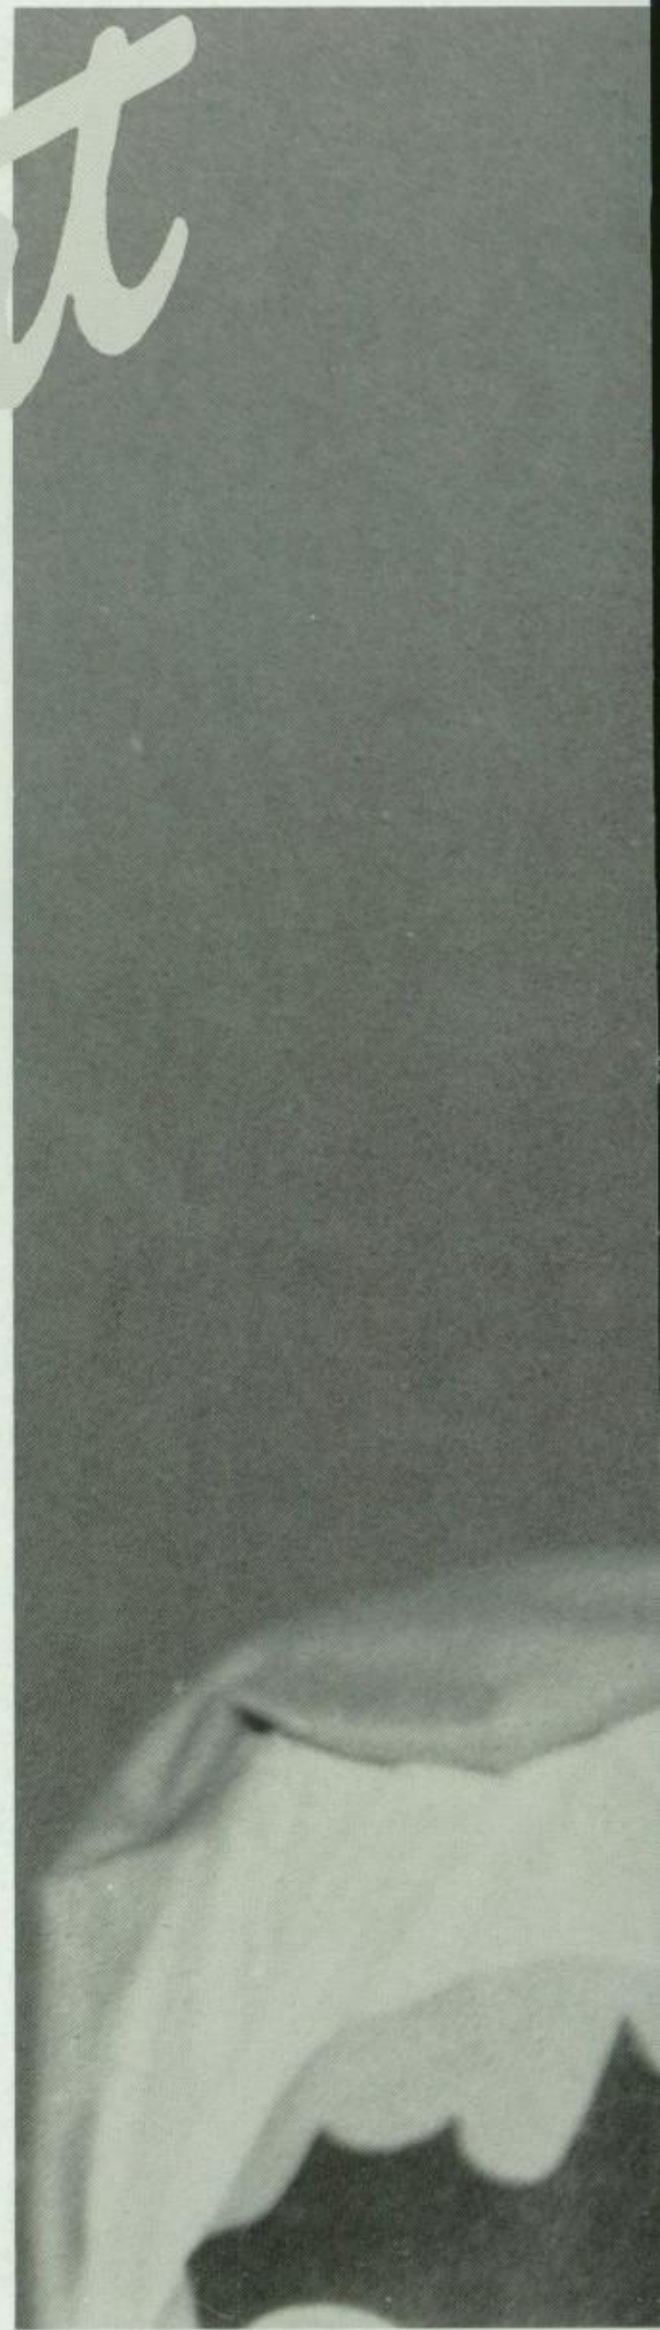

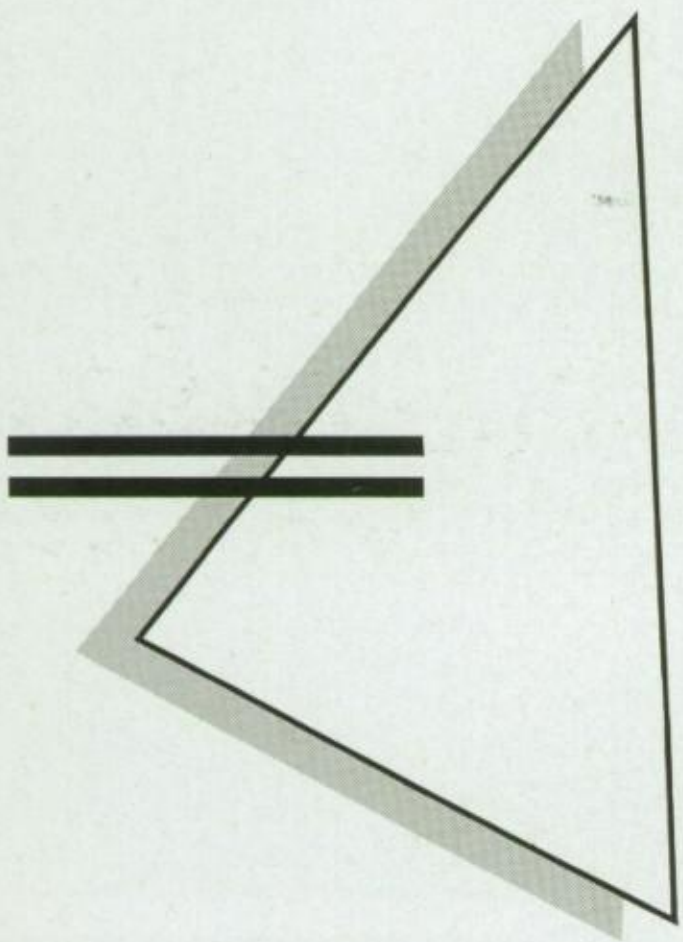

Click! They are forever captured on film, and they relax.

Back on the dance floor, the royal Homecoming Court is being announced. Darn! Archie and Veronica have not won, but there is always next year . . .

The couples have just begun to get into the music, and dance when, as always, all great things must come to an end. Alas, the dance is over as the clock strikes eleven, but for everyone, the night has only just begun . . .

Imagine walking in the parking lot and seeing a shiny, black VW bug with license plates "Othello" or a white, convertible Rabbit. These are the best-looking cars owned by seniors, namely, the cars that are owned by Justin DuBois and Kelley Baker, respectively. Both of these seniors spend time keeping their cars looking nice. "Just being given this award was worth all of our (Justin and his brother, Jason) effort," says Justin. In the picture, Justin and Kelley proudly pose beside their cars.

Well it's taken a long time but we finally became friends, I never thought we would. It has also taken forever for us to get out of school, but we finally are. I hope you achieve everything out of life, and go for your goals. Stay out of trouble and be good. Try to keep in touch.*

Sunil Bhopale and Kathy Kuboi are considered the best students by their classmates. Both are ambitious and have high grade point averages (GPA). Sunil has a 4.2 GPA (an A grade in an Honors class counts more than a college prep class) and wishes to attend UCSD or Cal Tech. Kathy's GPA is 3.8. She plans to attend college also, her top choices being UC Davis, UC Berkeley and Santa Clara University. Typical seniors are always clowning around, showing off, etc. Bubba Maloata, Scott Morris, Justin DuBois, and Tom McAfee show their senior personalities with their crazy antics.

Simply Seniors

They were the rowdiest at football and basketball games, the biggest partiers on weekends, and the least studious people at school. Who were they? Cheerleaders, jocks, punkers? No. They were the senior class!

The most spirited people on campus, seniors, were involved in many clubs and sports. These clubs included Key Club, Photo Club, and Ski Club, as well as academic clubs such as Math Club and Spanish Club. A new club, Senior Women, was started, thereby demonstrating the spirit of the senior class. The seniors were also predominant in all sports, including the newly formed water polo team.

The seniors were the leaders both in school and in most of their activities. Whenever a senior was involved in something, the fun was practically guaranteed.

S.A.T. Stress

"Hi Mom, I'm home!" Suzie Q. shouted as she walked through the front door. "Hi honey," her mother replied. "There is some mail on the kitchen table for you."

Suzie walked over to the table and picked up the letter addressed to her. Her heartbeat quickened as she read the return address. Could the letter from the College Board Admissions Testing Program contain her S.A.T. scores?

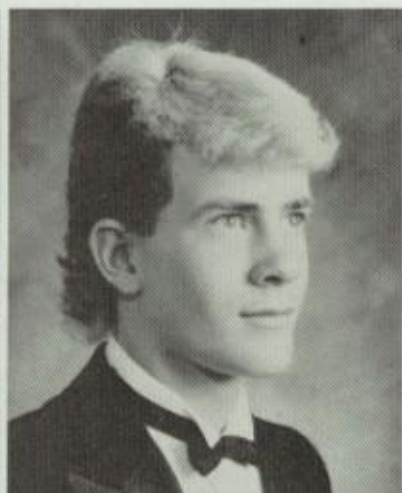

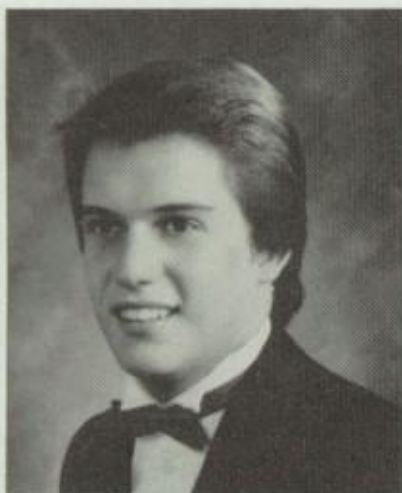

Suzie slowly tore the envelope open and peeked inside it. It was her S.A.T. score! She quickly pulled out the paper and scanned it, looking for her score. "Mom!" she shouted. "I got a 640 on Verbal and a 650 on Math!"

"Suzie! That's wonderful! That's a combined score of 1290!" Suzie was pleased with her results. All of her hard work had finally paid off. Hopefully, her scores would ensure her acceptance to her first choice college.

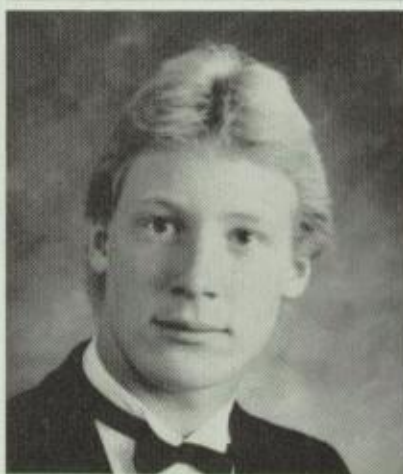

S.A.T. scores played an important part in the lives of college-bound seniors. While some seniors earned scores of less than 1000, others earned near-perfect scores of over 1500.

S.A.T. tests can be very annoying and frustrating. Jenny Falkenhan shows her annoyance by rolling her eyes while reviewing the test taking procedures in the career center.

Not Just For Garbage Anymore

Q/ What was brown, made of paper, and had pictures all over it? A paper bag. But not just any paper bag. These paper bags were for Mr. Hospers' psychology class. Each student was required to paste pictures on a grocery bag, each picture having to do with one of 28 topics. The various topics included likes/dislikes, childhood experiences, dreams, goals, family, and other related topics.

After covering their bags with pictures, the students took turns volunteering to talk about their bags. The class sat in a circle while one person spoke, explaining the significance of his/her bag. The person was able to explain the pictures in any order, but had to cover all the required topics. The person was also able to talk about two topics of his/her choice, concerning any topic. Many people expressed surprise at how in-depth some students went in revealing their personalities. Some of the speakers broke down and cried while they were talking about certain difficult experiences in their lives.

The bag exercise provided a chance for the students to learn more about others, as well as themselves. "I really enjoyed the bag exercise because I learned a lot about myself and others." -Teresa Uffelman.

Hello World!

June 12, 1987. The day all seniors were anticipating had finally arrived. Graduation was a reality at last. For most seniors, graduation was a joyous occasion, but it was also a sad one. Along with graduation came the realization of the ending of an era and the beginning of a new era. Never again would the seniors be in high school. High school football games, basketball games, and dances were a thing of the past. Besides the ending of high school activities came the ending of many high school friendships. Although people said, "I'll write," and, "We'll keep in touch," they knew they probably would not. They would leave home, go to college, or get a job, and they would find new friends. Although they would always keep their high school memories, they knew it was time to move on with their lives, no matter how painful it would be at first. "It is sad because I probably won't be seeing most of the people I go to school with any more. Most people say they will keep in touch, but unless you really make the effort, you lose contact. And knowing this is what makes graduation sort of sad." - Lisa Ann Hiura.

College Confusion

Where should I apply? Will I be accepted? What should my major be? Will I enjoy college? These were some of the many questions which plagued seniors as their high school years were coming to an end. Starting as early as the end of their junior year (for some people, even sooner) the seniors tried to make plans for their futures. They had to decide whether they wanted to attend college. If so, should it be full-time or part-time, while juggling a job? Some seniors decided against going to college, at least for a while, and decided to look for employment instead.

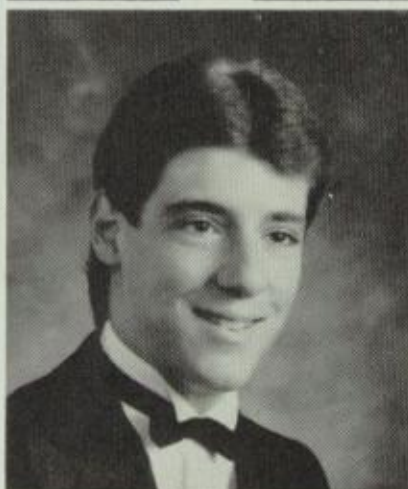

For those seniors who decided to attend college, the age-old questions came up, such as, "Where will I go?", and, "What will I study?" The seniors enlisted much aid in answering these and similar questions from relatives, friends, and adults from school.

Once deciding to attend college, seniors had to fill out seemingly endless forms and applications for the colleges of their choice. Some students hoped to gain entrance into the University of California system, while others preferred a state or junior college. Some students decided to attend school in the East, rather than on the West Coast. The thing that all college-bound seniors had in common was the feeling of uncertainty about their futures and college life. Until they received their acceptances from the colleges they hoped to attend, their lives were in a sort of limbo. "What will I do if I'm not accepted where I really hope to go?" was a frequently thought question by the seniors.

FLIRTING: GAMES PEOPLE PLAY

Left: Seniors Gretchen Steffin and Derick Smith prove that their "freshman flirting days" aren't over yet! The longest underwater kiss was 2 minutes and 18 seconds?

According to Webster's New World Dictionary, the definition of a flirt is as follows: 1. to make love without serious intentions 2. to trifle or toy. 3. one who plays at love.

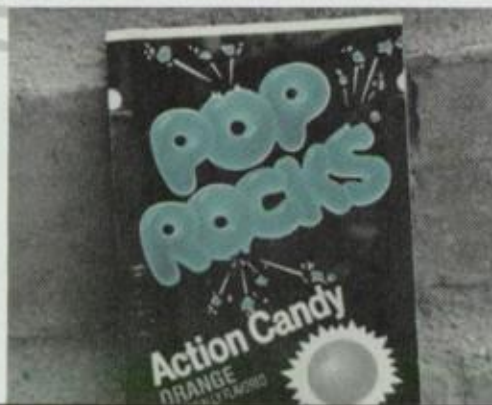

Alright, we've all seen it; we've all done it; and we've all fallen for it. But does anybody know a foolproof scamming scheme for securing that special someone in a secret yet seductive stunt? Figuratively speaking, all flirting finesse has its flaws. But first, let's go over some of the common and more basic techniques. All flirting begins with that almost too casual and pre-meditated conversation. This is called the ol' "Cue Card Technique." Questions like, "New shoes?" or "Are you staying up for the lunar eclipse tonight?" fall under this category. Then there's always the straightforward approach. Phrases like, "I've been watching you," and "How 'bout it babe?" are under this category. Fortunately, this method is seldom used and seldom successful. (unless of course you are a frolicking freshman, FRIGHTENING!) You can always send a message "Through the Grape-vine" but this plan also has some drawbacks. You know someone will tell two friends and they'll tell two friends and so on and so on until the whole school knows. Also the message may become distorted. Something innocent like, "Mike thinks Jenny's rad." may eventually become "Mike thinks Jenny's fat!" If all else fails one can always resort to using the "I'm-in-Trouble-Someone-Cute-Help-Me-on-the-Double" method. Fake injuries, mock car troubles, I-don't-understand-this-assignment, and other such melodramatic hogwash are common statements in this division.

When we take a closer look, we see how foolish flirting can be. But heck, life sure would be dull without it. So why not?

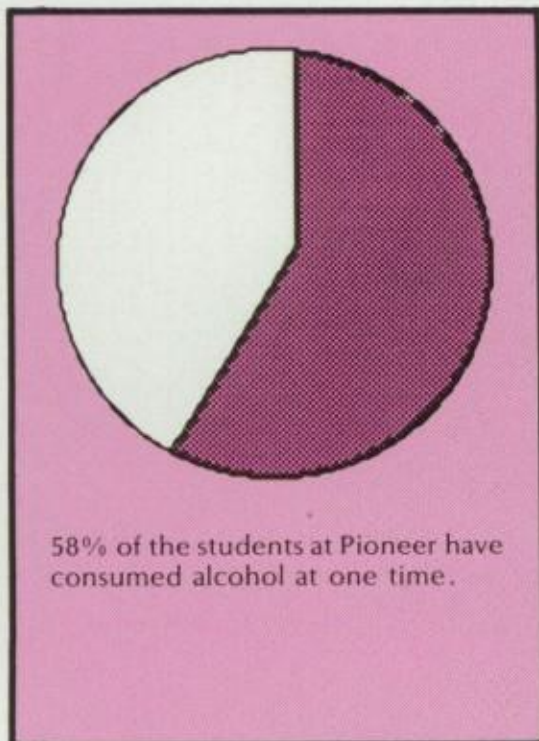

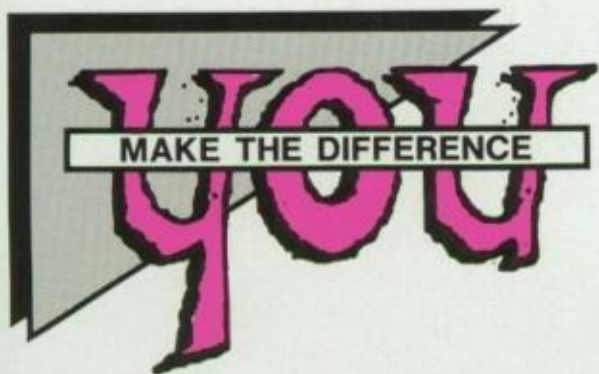

DID YOU KNOW

The longest underwater kiss was 2 minutes and 18 seconds?

POP ROCKS

They pop, they rock, and they're the sizzling new sensation. Yes, Pop Rocks are back, and they're back in full force! They may look different than they used to on the outside, but they're the same little explosive candy rocks that really pack a punch on the inside. There are three dynamic flavors to choose from: savage strawberry, outrageous orange and groovy grape. If you've never tried Pop Rocks before, why don't you go buy a pack? First, put a few on the tip of your tongue then fasten your seatbelt 'cause you're in for some fun! They crackle, they tickle, they jump around your mouth. The taste of Pop Rocks can't be beat from the North to the South. One thing to remember about Pop Rocks is this: please, oh please, never put them into your mouth before a kiss!

DID YOU KNOW

■ According to a survey on March 8, by the Mercury News, 80% of the Campbell Union High School District teen-agers drink alcohol?

CHEERS, BEERS, AND

Alcohol is becoming an increasingly bigger problem in the United States. Unfortunately, this problem is not limited to the adult population. Teenagers all over the U.S. are, sad as it may sound, becoming part of the alcohol-consuming part of our society. A survey conducted here at Pioneer showed that over half of the students have, at one time or another, consumed an alcoholic beverage. As students get older, their alcohol intake increases. 18% more senior men than freshmen had a drink of alcohol. The percentages for Pioneer women was about the same. Girls, however, seemed to drink slightly less than the guys. A surprising correlation made in the survey was that, generally, those whose parents drank, drank themselves. "Do as you parents do" seemed to be the prevailing attitude.

However on the brighter side, Pioneer students seemed aware of the fact that drinking and driving didn't mix. More than half of the students polled said they had not ever driven drunk. Also over half of the students said they would never accept a ride from someone who had been drinking. A statistic that seemed to sum up Pioneer students' attitude toward alcohol was the statistic that showed that 70% of the students thought that it was "okay" to drink. That is, they didn't think it was wrong to illegally consume alcohol. Obviously, Pioneer students did not consider their consumption of alcohol to be a problem. Almost 90% of the students polled said they were not addicted to a sub-ing problem. Either students weren't aware that there was a drinking problem or they just didn't consider their drinking to be a problem. Denial seemed to be rampant among those who drank.

Over half of the students had also tried pot. The percentage of underclassmen who had tried pot compared to the upperclassmen was slightly lower, but still unusually high. The numbers of students who had smoked pot was nearly as high as the number of students who drank.

Certainly the problem with alcohol, pot and other substances was not limited to Pioneer. Every high school had this problem, and a solution must be found before young lives are ruined or lost. Alcohol and pot, despite the light-hearted attitude that some students took towards them, caused serious problems. Statistics from an article in Reader's Digest stated that this year, every 27 minutes someone is killed by a drunk driver. That in itself was an alarming statistic. Every 27 minutes somebody's loved one died.

Substance abuse was a much discussed subject in classes, newspapers, and magazines in 1986-1987. It was a problem of American teenagers everywhere. The survey showed that Pioneer was no exception; that alcohol and marijuana were used and abused by students.

AIDS AFFECTS EVERYONE

AIDS ... Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome. We all know what it is. We all know it's fatal. We all know which groups are most likely to get the disease. At first, the American public was not that alarmed. Only homosexual men were supposed to get it. But now, we realize that this disease affects everyone. Nothing in the history of the United States can be compared to this epidemic. So far, there's no cure. Once the disease is acquired, there is no hope ... all victims will eventually die, slowly and painfully.

Within the last year and a half, two celebrities have died of AIDS: Rock Hudson and Liberace. Rock Hudson was a well-known actor and a sex symbol to the women of the 50's and 60's. Liberace was an extravagant, lavish, flashy pianist. The death of these two men not only meant the loss of two famous performers. It also made the American public realize that real people were dying of this disease. We've all seen the statistics and we've all heard the stories on the news. But few of us actually have known someone who has died of AIDS. With the death of these two famous people all Americans knew of somebody real who had died because of AIDS.

This disease affects everyone. Heterosexuals who have intercourse with someone who has the disease can get it. Drug addicts who use the same needles as someone who has the disease can get it. Hemophiliacs who receive a blood transfusion with blood from a person who has the disease can get it. Even babies born to a victim of AIDS will have the disease. That is the saddest part—a baby who hasn't even experienced life can be born with the disease already in its body.

Researchers all over the world are trying to come up with some answers. They can now identify the AIDS antibody in a person's body. But, so far, they have not been able to find a cure for it. All of the research points to the fact that if no cure is found, then by 1991 some 200,000 people will have died because of AIDS.

GOSSIP ISN'T JUST FOR GIRLS

"Whoa, dude ... look at that dish! Talk about fine!"

"I don't know, I prefer taller blondes. She's also got to lose about a pound."

Yes, it's sad but true. Guys gossip, too. And according to some sources, more than most girls.

The startling fact, though, is not that the guys are gossiping, but it's what they're gossiping about.

They talk about a variety of subjects, ranging from grades to girls to parties (and the latter two sometimes coincide). Some of the more innocent subjects include the previous 49ers game, the fact that we crushed Leland in the basketball game, and who is having a party next weekend. More daring and interesting topics discussed are "dude, who's more buffed," which girls are "hot" and which are not, who has dumped whom, who is scamming on whom, who was seen and where and with whom.

Some gossip can be characteristic of certain classes. Freshman talk about the peachfuzz on their faces that they will have to shave off the next morning with their unused razors. Sophomores discuss how awesome it will be when they get their licenses so their parents won't have to drive them and their dates to the Homecoming dance. Juniors exercise their upper-class privileges by gossiping about the low-life sophomores and freshman. Seniors talk about how hot the college women are going to be next year. (Little do they know that freshman college "boys" are the lowest of lows in the eyes of college women.)

after hours.....

1. Party 2. Go out with friends 3. See a movie 4. Relax or sleep

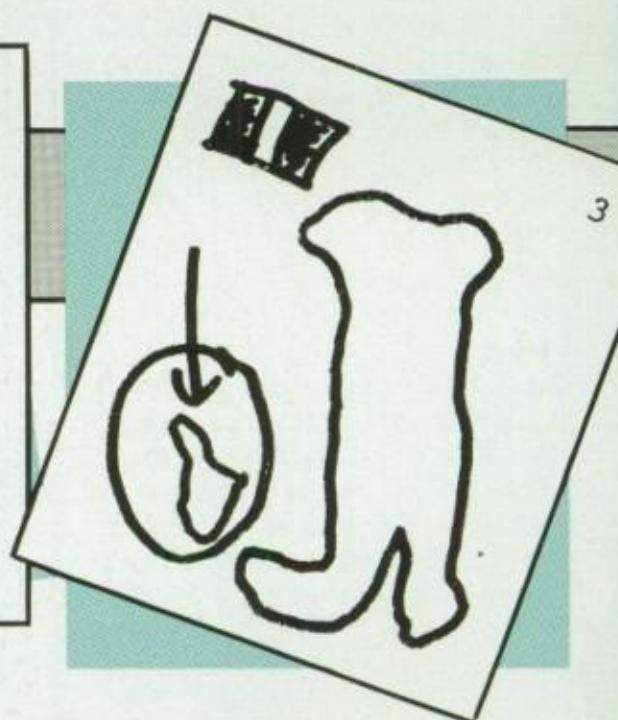

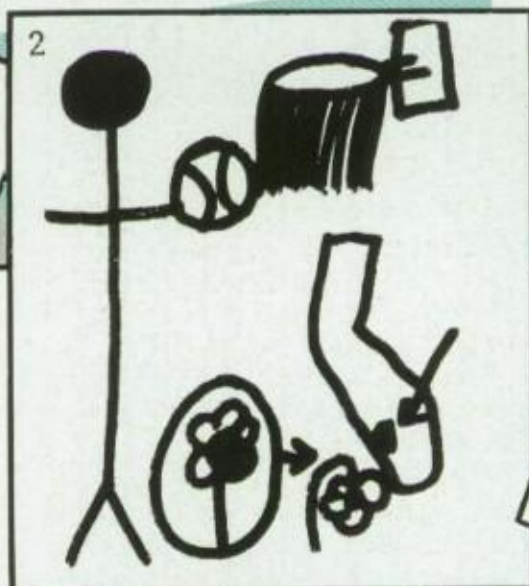

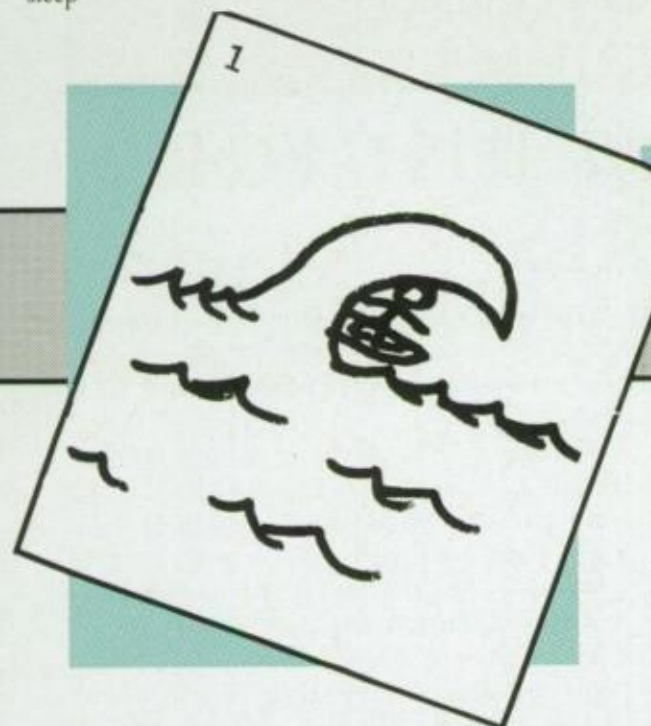

Pioneer students seem to have less and less free time on their hands. 'Play time' seemed to be reserved for weekends only.

The average student's time was filled with school activities. Their schedule seemed to revolve around school: coming and going to it, the piles of homework, studying for tests, sports, the training and competition, and the academic and social clubs. That does not even include the time for part-time jobs and out of school activities.

Of the students surveyed they proved the saying that 'Everybody loves a good party.' Amassing both girls and guys it was the one major activity on weekends. Partying was followed closely by being with friends and going out. With the flood of quality movies on the big screen and on videotape, some spent their extra-time sitting in front of a screen. Students also used the weekend for relaxing and sleeping. Many needed a break from the pressures of school. The results also showed that girls and guys liked to do different things: many of the girls liked to go shopping while the guys played sports or worked on their cars. The answers varied for both sexes from working to seeing one's boy/girlfriend to dancing.

But one thing was found in all the responses. Students wanted to get out of the house. They wanted to have fun and forget about school. They did whatever they wanted to. But just as they were really enjoying themselves alas, Monday arrived, once again too soon.

READY...SET...DRAW!

It's Friday night and you have no plans! All you have to look forward to is microwave popcorn, warm soda, and Miami Vice reruns. But hey, there's more to life than hanging out with yourself on a Friday night, isn't there? Sure there is, and we have the answer... Pictionary!! Pictionary is a great new way to test your artistic abilities, to interact socially, and to have loads of fun all at the same time. What more can you ask for in a board game? For those who aren't familiar with this now famous pastime, its object is similar to that of charades. The main difference is that instead of acting things out, you draw them to the best of your ability on a piece of paper. Your partner has exactly one minute to figure your drawing out. Playing this game with your friends can very often turn into a "dog-eat-dog-knock-'em-out" fiasco. For some strange and unknown reason, winning a game of Pictionary is of the utmost importance to a lot of people. On the same note, losing a game of Pictionary is like waking up in the morning without a cup of coffee.

If you are ever caught in a social rut, calling up a few close friends for a game of Pictionary is a must. Before you know it you will be frolicking in the festivities of a fun-filled Friday night!

1. Surfing 2. Wilt Chamberlain 3. Sicily

A new drink that hit the stores last year was Jolt Cola. It became popular for its slogan boasting, "All the sugar and twice the caffeine."

It appealed to students who wanted an extra pick-me up. A surprising fact about Jolt is that the effects of drinking one Jolt is equal to drinking two regular colas. Caffeine addict alias Shirley Choy retells her first Jolt experience, "OK, the secret to success is to take lots of caffeine - in any form. One night I had three cups of coffee, then downed half a can of Jolt. I was totally wired for the rest of the night."

Jolt Cola may just be the drink of the year. There's no doubt that it's all ready making an impact on the sale of No-Doz and students who drink coffee.

Becoming a foreign exchange student is a big decision. Where am I going to live? With Whom? Where am I going to go to school? Who'll be my friends? Will I like it there? Will they like me?

For Detlev "Dave" Nissan, an 18 year old from Hamburg, West Germany, it was an easy decision. Perfecting his English for school and future jobs appealed to him. But he also stated, "Not everybody has the chance to jump to another continent and see different things."

After staying in America for awhile, Dave had to accept some changes. In Germany the buildings are made of stone, the weather is colder, and lunch and dinner are switched around. Perhaps the most different things were having to wake up early for the 7 a.m. class and taking 8 53-minute classes. Back home he had a total of eleven classes, but he had only six each day. The classes rotated each day. His school schedule used to start at 8 a.m. and finish at 1:20 p.m. The classes were only 45 minutes long. "School is much easier here," Dave noted.

Back home in his free time, Dave enjoyed climbing the mountains, sailing, and playing basketball and volleyball for school. At Pioneer he played on the Pioneer tennis team. He also liked listening to music from a-ha, Victor Lazlo, and the Beach Boys.

Asked what he would remember about Pioneer Dave said, "The long lunch hour." Back in Germany, lunch was only 20 minutes long. The one thing that Dave wanted to do while here in California was to visit Disneyland. But until then, he was having fun meeting new people and learning to drive.

CH-CH-CH- CHANGES

The 1986-87 school year for the San Jose Unified School District was full of changes. Many of these changes were noticed on the Pioneer campus. This year was unique and different in many ways. Some of the changes on our campus were major ones, such as the beautification of the quad. Other changes, such as new food items in the snack bar, weren't quite as noticeable. Students appreciated some of the changes and disliked others but all agreed, they added to the uniqueness of Pioneer.

1. 7 periods
2. quad renovation
3. locked parking gates
4. Senior Ball 9 to 1 instead of 8 to 12
5. photo club
6. Spanish club
7. French club
8. peer tutoring
9. Grad Night
10. Homecoming on a Saturday night
11. Junior Prom on a Saturday night
12. expanded snack bar

FLYING HIGH IN SPIRIT

In early February, radio station K.W.S.S. sponsored a spirit contest for all South Bay high schools. The name of the school, "The Jets," and "K.W.S.S." were the three items to be written on a three-by five card. By March 6, the high school with the most cards would win a live performance by — you guessed it — The Jets!

Thousands upon thousands of cards poured in daily as spirited students wrote to bring The Jets to Pioneer. Single cards, hundreds, and even boxfuls of cards were written daily, and numerous card-writing parties were held to help the cause.

"I wrote 800 myself in an hour and forty-five minutes," boasted John Bailey.

"A lot of people think that Pioneer doesn't have any spirit. Well, I think it does," declared Lisa Pitts.

Although Pioneer led for most of the contest, we were beaten out in the home stretch. Still, many deserved much credit for their valiant effort.

Like many others, Lisa Pitts wanted The Jets to come to Pioneer.

THE WAY IT REALLY WAS

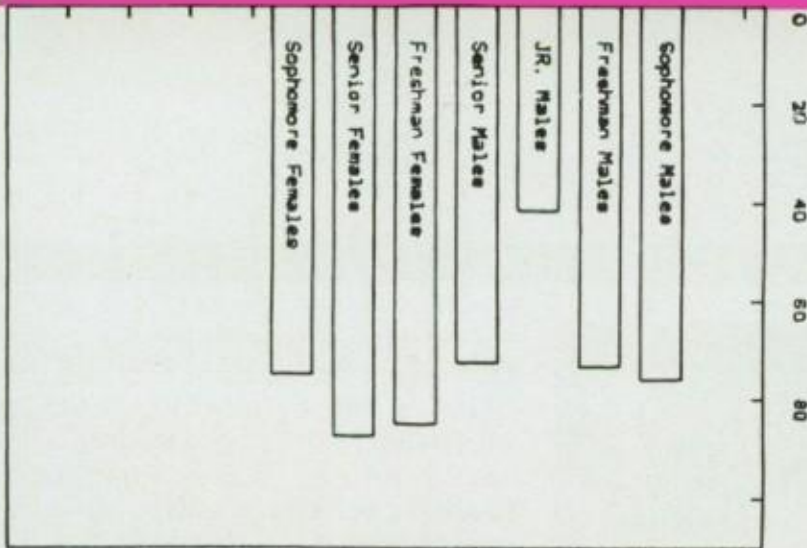

"No, I don't want to see it, because then I might be depressed." These were the exact words of a friend the night I called in regard to seeing the movie Platoon. He ended up seeing it up anyway. So did I. So did many other of my friends. It ended up being our topic of conversation for the rest of the night.

Unlike many other movies and shows about the Vietnam war which glorify war, this was an extraordinary movie which presented Vietnam as it really was — bloody. Its director was a survivor of the war, and he was successful in creating an atmosphere very much like that of real war. I experienced an extreme hatred for the soldiers of the Viet Cong. At one point, I blurted out an expletive as a V.C. soldier shot an American soldier in the head.

Merciless murders, torn-open stomachs and burnt corpses were a common sight. Although many critics charge that the movie was "too gross," this writer believes that extreme atrocities were the only way to present Vietnam as it really was. And present them he did — very successfully.

Despite all these atrocities, this movie is one that is really "moving" and worthwhile to see. It is not depressing, yet it rouses our emotions to a peak, then lowers them, then raises them again — just like a real war.

All classes attended one to three concerts per year.

As the new year was rung in, so were many new songs destined to become smashes on all of the music polls around the world. Such top songs were naturally sung by top artists. Our survey asked students to indicate which artists were their favorites. They responded as follows. The responses are in their order of preference from first to third:

Senior Males: Genesis, Led Zepplin, Y&T.

Senior Females: Genesis, Chicago, Prince.

Junior Males: Genesis, Led Zepplin, (Tie) Beach Boys, Bon Jovi, Run DMC, New Order.

Sophomore Females: Bon Jovi, Beastie Boys, Depeche Mode.

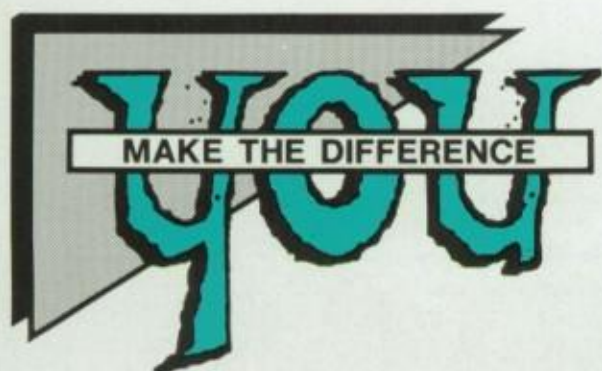

Freshman Males: Beastie Boys, Bon Jovi, (Tie) Van Halen, Genesis.

Freshman Females: Beastie Boys, Run DMC, The Smiths.

The graphs to the left show two other aspects of music-related responses. The top one indicates favorite types of music, and the bottom one indicates the number of concerts attended per year.

YOU SAID IT...

IT'S A "HIT"!

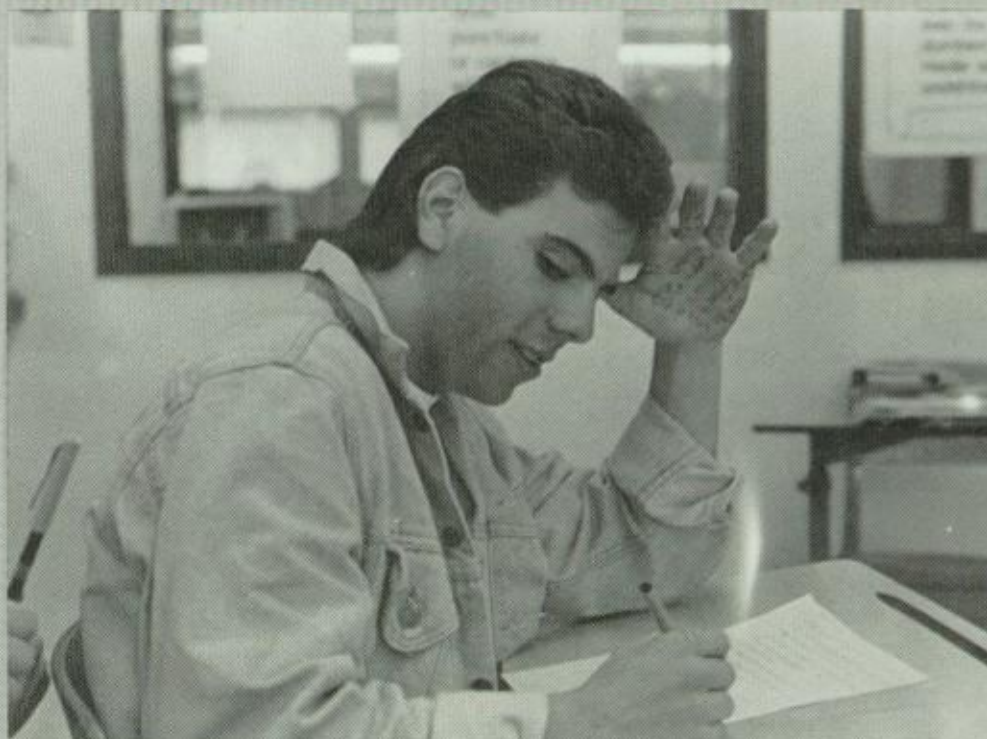

"Look! Up in the sky! It's a bird! It's another bird! It's an air-raid!!!"

Nearly everyday at lunchtime, the students of Pioneer were overwhelmed by thousands upon thousands of seagulls. Nobody knew why they came to Pioneer, or where they came from, but they just kept coming. The birds would circle the quad, seemingly looking for "targets" - Pioneer students - for "hits." Soon enough, not getting "hit" became an obsession.

Students were faced with a horrible decision. The essential question was "to be hit or not to be hit!" Daring students ate their lunches in the quad, just daring the birds to "hit" them. Others were very careful and tried to prevent from being "hit" by dodging the "hits" with some fancy footwork. Less adventurous types protected themselves with Pee-Chees, jackets, and plastic bags whenever they left the cover of the overhangs. Beating the birds was soon a major pastime at Pioneer. Oh the games people play; they're for the birds.

BUT EVERYONE DOES IT...

EAT YOU HEART OUT!

Food has always been an important aspect of school life and Pioneer is no exception. Students had "snack attacks" for almost every type of food imaginable. Health-conscious eaters snacked on fresh fruits and vegetables. Everyone else, it seemed, was into sugar. This year, Pioneer had seemingly endlessly successful candy sales - M&Ms, Gummy Bears, Blow Pops, and chocolate bars of every variety. New additions to the school snack bar, including mini-donuts and zingers, were also extremely popular snacks. The return of an old favorite, Pop Rocks, made many students happy and drove teachers crazy with its fizzing, crackling sound effects.

Perhaps the most sought after snacks of all were unavailable to the students. Due to closed campus, Burger King, McDonald's, Taco Bell, and Togo's were unattainable food delights. However, Pioneer students survived this tragedy by simply tearing the wrapper off yet another chocolate bar.

BUT DOES THAT MAKE IT RIGHT?

Cheating. We've all done it, we've all seen it being done, we all know what it is. Or do we? Everyone seems to have their own definition of what cheating actually is. Most students consider cheating the act of looking on someone else's during a test, or using a cheat sheet. Right? Well sort of. That's only part of it. According to our school's definition of cheating, it is as following:

- * Eye contact with another student during a test or exam.
- * Talking or any other form of communication during a test or exam.
- * Plagiarizing already published work (this includes big brother's or sister's essay from last year)
- * Using test cheat sheets
- * Letting someone look or copy from your paper.
- * Telling other students what's on the test or exam to come.
- * Copying homework assignments.

So there you have it, what the administration considers copying to be. And what exactly do the students at Pioneer say? They pretty much agree with the above definition, but there's room for argument when it comes to the last three. If someone whispers to you to move your paper over so as to see your answers, most students will go ahead and look. You say to yourself, "It's their risk. If they get caught, they get in trouble, not me. Anyway I already know the answers." Next there's the most asked question question on Friday- "Did you take the test already? Is everything that Mr./Mrs. _____ said would be on it? Are there any true or false? Is there multiple choice? Any fill in? Please say there isn't any essay questions? Does Mr./Mrs. _____ give us time to study before he/she passes out the test?" We've all asked these questions, and we've all been asked. But is it fair to answer? What about that first period student who just went in to class that very same Friday morning not knowing one thing that's going to be on that test? Then you come along and expect to be told what's on the test so you can study any last minute information, and possibly get a better score. Then there's copying those dittos, study guides, vocabulary sheets, accounting sheets, and math assignments. You (like other students) say, "But that's not cheating, it's homework. And what's the difference of copying my friend's, when I'm gonna copy it out of a book?" But believe it or not it's still cheating. It's not your own work, it was done for you. But what can we do about it? Well for one, our administration is working on a way to cut down on cheating by drawing up a new cheating policy. The consequences will be severe in hopes to cut down on this growing problem. But the biggest barrier in stopping cheating is peer pressure, the pressure of saying "NO".

92-SURVEY SAYS

ONE STEP AHEAD

Tennis shoes were one of the hottest wardrobe savers for both male and female trend setters. Reebok, America's number one selling footwear, led the tennis shoe craze. From high-tops to down to earth tennies, they came in all different colors and sizes. Pastel pink, yellow, and blue gave light-colored clothes matching companions. The primary colors of red, yellow, and blue awarded the wearer a feeling of uniqueness. The Reebok orange, green, and black high-tops brought out a feeling of wildness and excitement to the "sole". Despite all the high fashion wild colors, white tennis were still high on the top of the shoe charts.

Boots were also fashion savers of 1987. The rhinestone studded boots looked totally trendy with those old jeans. The "Western Punk" boots revitalized the tired, old denims and brightened the wardrobe.

Huaraches were another popular footwear style seen on campus. These flat sandals with straps or woven leather strips were favored by surfers and casual types alike. Huaraches were a form of comfortable shoes enjoyed by guys and girls to avoid the painful blisters.

Another popular unisex style of shoes was the espadrille, a casual shoe with a canvas upper and a sole of rubber or rope. This soft fabric footwear came in all sorts of trendy colors. From plain white to brilliant red, they were great for matching those baggy pants or full skirts.

The shoes of this year reflected casual comfort and individuality of style.

TIMELY TRENDS

Last year the big trends in watches were Swatch watches and digital watches, also the kind with a built-in calculator. This year, though, it seemed that watches were getting less sporty and more classical and fashionable.

The watches seen on wrists today vary in looks and taste. The new trend seemed to be bangle watches. These were watches with wrist-bands much like a solid-bangle bracelet. For girls, the new thing was fabric watches. These watches came in a variety of fabrics and were tied on the wrist. Gem stoned watches were also popular as well as watches with changable, colored bands. Slinky and cinch watches were also among some of the favorites. Even though swatches and digital watches were still in, the biggest favorite in watches this year was the traditional gold or silver quartz watch, you remember - the kind with two hands and numbers.

FRUGAL FASHIONS

Are you the type of person who loves to look like a million but doesn't want to spend a million? If the answer is yes, this article is a must read for you.

Believe it or not, your mom or grandma's attic may contain treasures you can use. An old prom dress may be very handy. Can you use it as is? If not, you can cut and redesign it to fit your personality and taste! Cut off the top and use the skirt alone, add a ribbon or two, and tahdah - a new addition to the closet.

Do you need accessories? Old shawls, bags, or jewelry that are collecting dust in someone's closet may be just what you've been searching for. Mom's old, broken watch may be turned into a neat bracelet with a little imagination.

You might think it is beneath your dignity to shop at thrift and retail, resale shops, but they are a better resource of fashion additions than you think. With a keen sense of fashion selection, you might even find a fine, lace blouse, a hand-embroidered jacket, or metals on an old uniform that can be turned into a new, fashionable outfit without costing a small fortune.

Enough with the old stuff! How would you like to get some name brand fashions at a low price? Some discount stores, such as Ross, have expensive designer wear at marked down prices. End of season sales may be worth the wait because the prices are usually cut in half. Buy that Cole swimsuit at the end of summer, lose a few pounds if needed, and look fabulous next year with a new suit and a new figure.

Bargains are easy to find if you know where to look. With a little imagination and fashion know-how, a great outfit can be yours without breaking the bank.

IT'S A HAIRY BUSINESS

From curls to spiking, hair styles certainly are changing. This year we observed a great variety of hair styles for both guys and girls. For guys, hairstyles were mostly short and ranged from spiked and peroxided bangs to super short flat tops and the surfer or marine look. Layered hair was also in for guys this year as well as hair sculpture — arrows, letters, etc. One thing was for sure in guys' hairstyles this year: a lot of mousse, gel, and hairspray were used.

For girls this year, a variety of hair techniques were used. Common hair styles included crimping, tiny braids, French braiding, pulled back hair with a bow, banana combs, pony tails (high, low, back, side) and clips. Curly hair was definitely "in" this year. This look was created by perms, heated rollers, "Con-air Hot Sticks," and "Clairol Benders." Layered and spiked bangs were also "in". Girls also used a lot of mousse, gel, and especially hair spray. A new trend that came out this year was hair cosmetics. These consisted of bright colors that were actually put on the hair by brush or liquid. Popular types of hair cosmetics were "Zazu Colorburst" and "Pizzaz" — which even came complete with a fake ponytail! And what was used to get their treated hair back to normal? Why, hot oil treatment, of course!

On the right: Susan Glowacki and Brian Milligan display the "in" styles of crimping and spiking. Ariadne Sarros shows off her bow.

And now for a man who eats articles like these for breakfast.

A TV Date?

Are you in a dateless rut? Tired of going out with the same old people? Well, if you answered "yes" to the previous questions you'll be glad to know that two television shows have gone ahead and solved your social problems. First, there's "The Love Connection." In this show a person gets to choose a date from a videotape, then go out with him and come back a few weeks later to tell all the events of the date on T.V. Sometimes these dates have a happy ending, and sometimes there's just an ending. Next, there's the recent comeback of "The Dating Game." On this show, a bachelorette gets to ask three eligible bachelors, which she can't see, various questions and then decide which one she wants to go out with. Usually both people are happy with the outcome of the decision, but you never know, these things could go either way. Now that you've read this, take the initiative, go watch these shows and pick up on some dating techniques. Let's just hope that all your dates are good ones tonight!

acterization that people just couldn't get enough of. Another reason for the show's popularity was its daring. One episode was shot almost entirely in black-and-white, while another was a spoof of Shakespeare.

However, one of the drawbacks of "Moonlighting" was that the network airs too many reruns of the program. Because the show was expensive to produce (even more than "Dynasty") and the scripts take longer to write, viewers were often kept anxiously waiting for new episodes.

Although "Moonlighting" was very popular in 1987, will it continue to stand above all other T.V. shows? Well, as David would put it: "Are you kidding? Do bees bee, do bears bear?"

It is a well known fact that the junior year is the most demanding and most critical one in high school. Even so, juniors were some of the most spirited people at Pioneer this year. The class was actively involved in sports, clubs and also achieved academic excellence. Here's to the Class of '88—you've just got one more year to go!

"A friend is someone who knows you as you are, understands where you've been, accepts who you've become, and still, gently invites you to grow."

This anonymous saying easily sums up the meaning of a true friend. To most students, their friends are the most important people to them during high school. They are the people who share your successes and failures in love, school, sports, and whatever else that comes along. After all, it's a friend who:

- Cries with you when you break up with your boy/girl friend.
- Listens when you need to talk about family problems.
- Doesn't criticize, but accepts your decisions to go out with someone they don't approve of.
- Waits after school while you're making up a test.
- Sits on a hard, cold bench to watch you play soccer.

Years after you're out of high school you'll still remember all the times you spent with your friends-both the good and the bad. They're your confidantes, your soulmates in the endless search for fun and happiness that comes hand in hand with high school.

The goal of all Pioneer High School athletes is to compete in a sport and receive their varsity block letter. For many, after they receive their letter, they stuff it in a box somewhere and save it as a high school memento. But for those Mustangs who like to show their pride, the letter is put on a jacket or a sweater.

The tradition began many years ago during the "Happy Days Era" when Richie Cunningham showed the country the right way to show one's true spirit. During the 1950's, letterman sweaters were the fad. The letter was attached to the middle of the left side. Stars or strips, which represented junior varsity or varsity sports, were attached along the side of the left sleeve. The athlete's name was usually on the front of the right lapel with the year that he or she was to graduate on the right sleeve. The sweater was used as a symbol during those "puppy love" teenage romances. The guy would give his sweater to his girlfriend, and she would wear it around town to show that they were "going steady."

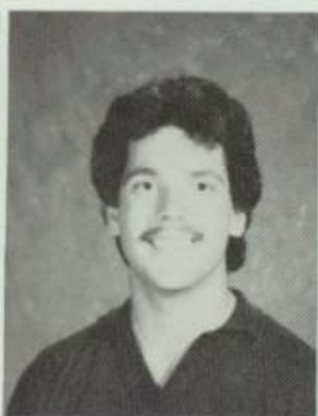

After the Fifties the new fad was the letterman jacket. It served the same purpose as the sweater, although the decorations were rearranged. This fad has lasted all the way into the Eighties. Lately the jackets are becoming more popular, but still a few Mustangs are trying to bring back the Fifties with their letterman sweaters. The school spirit really shines as one walks through the quad with his or her jacket or sweater. One can sense the pride that a letterman has by just watching him. Pride not only in his school, but also in himself for accomplishing his goal.

Mysteriously, when sophomores become juniors, they discover that the best things in life are not free. Did you ever wonder what juniors did to make that extra buck? Well, juniors are real people too, and they must work hard for their money just like everyone else. The jobs juniors have are very diverse; they range from stockperson to salesperson to grocery baggers to teachers of the deaf. Andy Woolley, who works in the stockroom at the Foot Locker in Oakridge, says, "I like working in the mall because I get to watch all the people walk by. Also, I like to meet new people." Some juniors work not for the social aspects, but for future benefits. Junior Laura Klee has two jobs during the year. In the summer she works with deaf children and during the school year she works as an office helper in a dentist's office. Says Laura, "I work because I like working with people and I also need the extra money. Plus, I think it's a great experience!" Some juniors work in spite of their tight schedules. Lee Matsumoto, a bagger at Safeway Grocery Store, says, "It's tough to work and go to school at the same time, but I can't afford to live on just my allowance." Still other juniors work for their material needs. Frank Scorpiniti, a clerk at Long's Drug Store, says "It's a demanding job, but I've learned a lot about merchandising, which is valuable in pursuing further job opportunities. Also, I need the money!" Judging from the testimonies from these and other juniors, one comes to the conclusion that as long as there are jobs available, juniors will be working. When asked what the money from the jobs is used for, the overwhelming response is: "What else? The great junior privilege-a car!"

Here we have the real meaning of friends, and what it is like to be able to spend time with them!

SO CLOSE BUT YET SO FAR!

When a student enters high school, his ultimate goal is graduation. To the freshman it looms like a giant treasure box off in the distance, seemingly unattainable. As he breezes through his freshman and sophomore years he thinks to himself "Graduation-no problem!" But then he enters his junior year. Ideally this should be a fun year; he's finally old enough to stay out late and, best of all, he can drive. Most teenagers have an established circle of friends with whom they feel completely comfortable and with whom they spend their free times. Unfortunately with the junior year also comes a much heavier school load. Three to four hours of homework becomes a daily ritual as the poor junior becomes overburdened with responsibility. Suddenly graduation seems to be a lot farther away than he had originally thought. Now his goal has become making it through the junior year without having a mental breakdown! But take heart future juniors, if you do survive your junior year you'll only have one "short" year left. So close but yet so far?!?!

To an average Pioneer student, taking what were called "honors classes" meant having more homework, studying a little bit more, and trying a little bit harder to pay attention in class. But for juniors, honors classes meant a whole lot more.

The in-class essay made life tougher for juniors. No longer were they able to take their own sweet time writing, or call up their friends to ask them what they were going to write about. Instead, they were racing with the clock trying to write a decent essay in about 56 minutes. If a student "composer" wanted to use a certain word, but didn't know just quite how to spell it, he didn't have time to look it up. Instead, he had to use a synonym that he did know how to spell. Some students would often find themselves right in the middle of their essays with only five minutes left to finish the rest of it.

Juniors in honors classes also had to write term papers. These papers involved hours of reading and research. Sometimes it meant having to spend Saturday afternoons at the library and missing out on all the fun that was going on in the real world. Some people even lost sleep over their papers and stayed up the whole night typing. According to one Junior, "The week your term paper is due is like the week astronauts train before going into outer space."

Although they involved a lot of work, honors classes really help prepare kids for their future. "At first it seems as if the effort you put into it isn't worth what you get out of it, but you really learn a lot, no matter how much you lie to yourself," said Casey Castron. Adam Schwenker said, "There's a lot of work involved, but I think it's all worth it because it helps you prepare for college." But most juniors agreed with Pat Lin, who when giving his opinion about honors classes said, "It's very hard."

It's Sunday morning, the day before the infamous term paper deadline, and you still have the bibliography, footnotes, table of contents, title page and appendix to finish; but what are you doing with the few valuable hours left to finish your paper? Of course, you're talking on the phone with your best friend, catching up on the latest gossip of the past weekend!

This is a junior's biggest downfall in high school, procrastination. Although juniors are not the only students guilty of waiting until the last possible minute to finish essays, reports and other long-term projects, the junior year is usually a student's hardest year, and thus procrastination hurts them the most. Procrastination causes much stress and strain on the brain; it is usually the reason one stays up late, is overtired due to lack of sleep the next morning, and worst of all, it is the cause of sloppy, "Thrown together" projects.

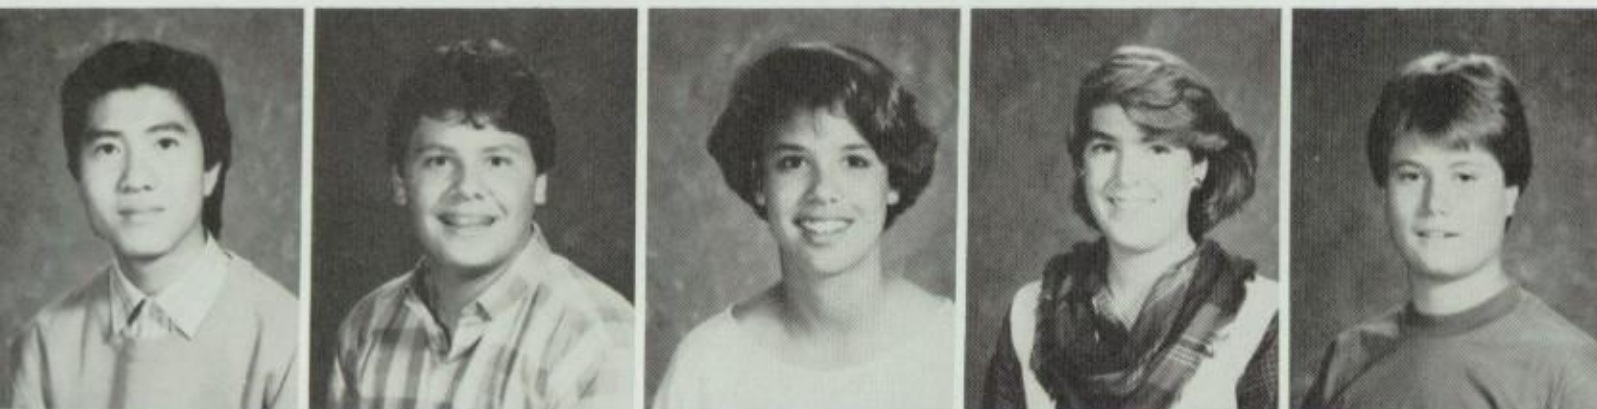

However, school work is only one reason for procrastination. The cause of tardies and absences for many students, is waiting until the last possible moment to get up and out of bed. Ten minutes before school starts, the typical procrastinator is jumping out of bed pulling back the hair and throwing on sweats. Forget the make-up, brushing the teeth or deodorizing the arms. Rush to school and you're tardy by just five minutes. Others who are less fortunate miss the class entirely and end up in AIM. People usually don't outgrow procrastination, but if one tries hard there is the possibility of overcoming it.

Tracy Noriega, Cindy Morris, and Jennifer Raney are typical procrastinators.

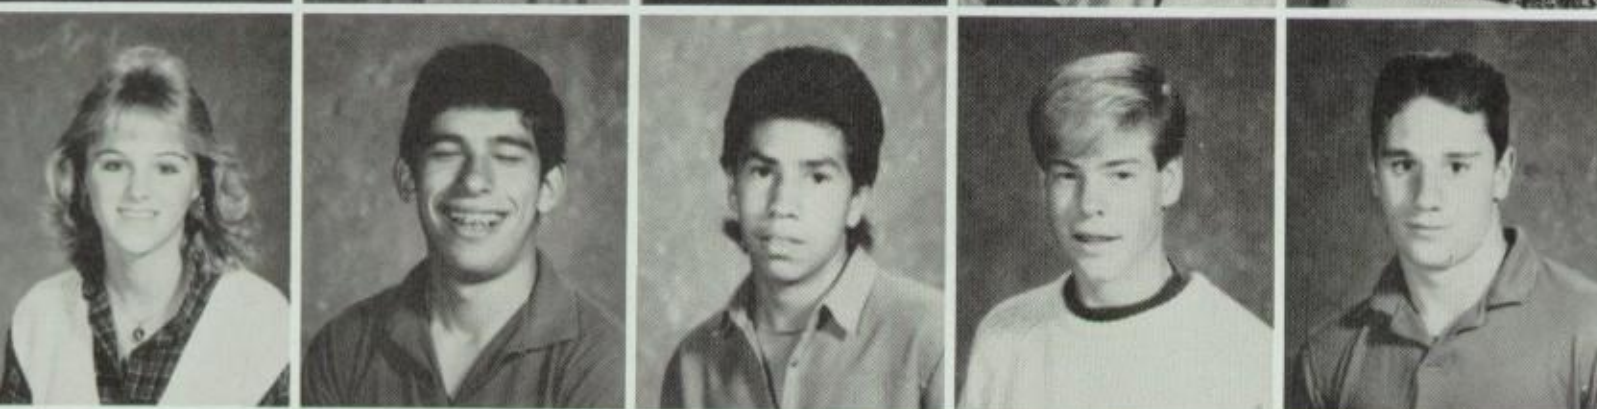

As Cindy Morris is hard at work on her yearbook story, Tracey Noriega comes along and gives her some good advice.

Junior Erika Paige Falk spent the past school year living in Germany as part of a foreign exchange program. The following is an excerpt of a letter she wrote to the friends that she left behind here at Pioneer High School:

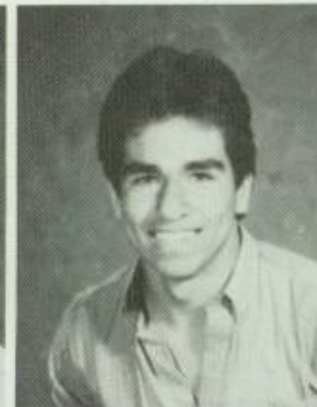

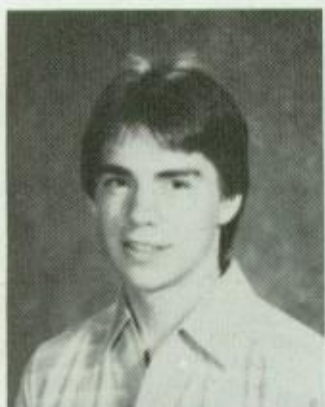

GREETINGS FROM DEUTSCHLAND!!! If anyone writes that it is still sunny and warm in San Jose, their post will not be returned! I'm COLD! You thought my hands were purple last year . . . It has rained for 3 days straight. This is naturally quite the uncool deal as I must ride my bike to school. School=BLEH! It is really difficult. These are my classes: English, politics, biology, chemistry, physics, German, math, history, religion, French (4th year), and sports. I am in one of the fortunate classes who do not have school on Saturday. If anyone gets the idea I will return home smart, they are sadly mistaken. If I never see another Langenseheit's Universal "perfect for the pocket" German Dictionary before I die, it will be too soon for me. The language barrier bites the big banana! I'm getting better, but if given a choice, I would rather eat sauerkrat (BLEH!) than continue to offend people with my German. The family. The host sisters are, at times, tolerable. I can't be too harsh on them as I'm sure they think no better of me, and I can contribute any (or most) faults in their character to their mom. Mom. Well, the host mom is nice, but she babies her children and me. This includes restricting my evening activities to visiting the neighbors or at best a social visit to a friend until 10 p.m. You may be asking yourselves why I haven't taken the first train heading west, but I've made it a personal goal to alter the host mother's (Frau Hanneloore Neusse) views on socializing. My host sister (15) does not like to dance, party, or in general, talk. Her idea of a good Saturday night is reading a book or watching T.V. in perfect seclusion. I see nothing wrong with that myself, but I must admit I began to draw certain parallels to a Mr. Boo Radly. I have, however, gone to a couple of pubs with some girls from my class . . . If anyone is interested in Dusseldorf fashion, these are my observations. They like U.S.A. things. Seriously, Everyone wears cowboy boots, jeans, jeans jackets, jeans shirts, skirts, and anything else that can be made out of denim. The style is quite predominately baggy. I can best describe this as a sort of German preppy. As far as films are concerned, they take everything American and 'dub' it. Top Gun was also popular here last summer, as was The Color Purple. They just got Spies Like Us. On TV, there are also tons of American shows, like Simon and Simon, Scarecrow and Mrs. King, etc. Actually nothing I like but the music is pretty different . . . So please excuse this letter (i.e. it's spelling, it's boring contents) it has been written (completely) during an art discussion which has lasted for 2 hours and of which I have completely failed to comprehend anything.

So-as they say here in Germany,
Auf Wiedersehen!

High School is still a new thing for underclassmen. Sophomores anxiously look forward to eventually joining the ranks of the upperclassmen, while freshmen strive to leave behind their "new kid on the block" status. As they enviously watch, worship, and emulate their upperclassmen counterparts, every sophomore and freshman knows his turn for greatness will come.

DRIVING

Sophomores In Training

It was early in the morning. Bubble-head Betty got out of her dad's car and kissed him good-bye. "Bye-bye daddy!" she said. "Her dad looked at her nervous face and said, "Remember to use your blinkers, dear." "OK, daddy" waved Betty.

Betty nervously walked toward the dark, empty quad. Nobody was at the school yet! Suddenly, Mr. Rose appeared from nowhere. "Are you ready?" "I think so!" exclaimed Betty. She slowly walked toward the dreadful car. It was now light out, but the parking lot seemed dark to Betty. As she got in the car, she was frantically trying to remember the motions of preparing to drive.

She got into the back seat to patiently await her turn behind the wheel. The unknown sophomore behind the wheel was not at all nervous. Going up and down the rows, she observed the driver's every move. "Pull over," said Mr. Rose. It's Betty's turn. Betty's heart nearly stopped. This was it. The hours she had spent studying for this would now be tested, behind the wheel!

"Buckle up!" She stepped on the gas, and the car slowly rolled forward. Mr. Rose gave her specific directions. The big, wide parking lot seemed to be small and narrow. She remembered all of the things her daddy had taught her. "Don't panic and don't kill anyone," she remembered. The curbs seemed like walls.

Up and down the rows she went. She did everything correctly, but Mr. Rose knew this girl was not ready to own a car. "Pull over," he said. As the car came to a stop, Betty smiled. It was all over. The first day of training was finally over! "Is that it?" she asked. "Yup, you did just fine Betty." Betty happily got out of the car knowing it was all over, until tomorrow!

All characters in this story are fictional (except Mr. Rose, of course). Any characters resembling any persons living or dead is purely coincidental.

Above: The ultimate goal of all sophomores is to own and drive their own car like these two upperclassmen are doing.

HOW TO . . .

Make A Sophomore Float

"A lot of hard work goes a long way."

-Matt Miller

"The truck we used had pretty little curtains, big wheels, and looked like a giant Tylenol capsule."

-David Harris

"I believe that the sophomore class superiority was clearly defined through the complexity of our float. The sophomore class showed spirit and creativity with their theme, 'Louie, Louie.'"

-Becky O'Rear

"It was fun and I'm glad I had a chance to be a part of it. It was hard work but worth the effort."

-Rupal Desai

"I enjoyed working with my friends."

-Tiffany Moore

"It was a real fun experience and I'm glad I was involved. The finished product was well worth the hard work."

-Lisa Pitts

"Forget the rest, ours was the best!"

-Payal Shah

"It was a real great experience working with other sophomores on this original float. I loved doing our 'Louie, Louie' dance"

-Yordanos Yohannes

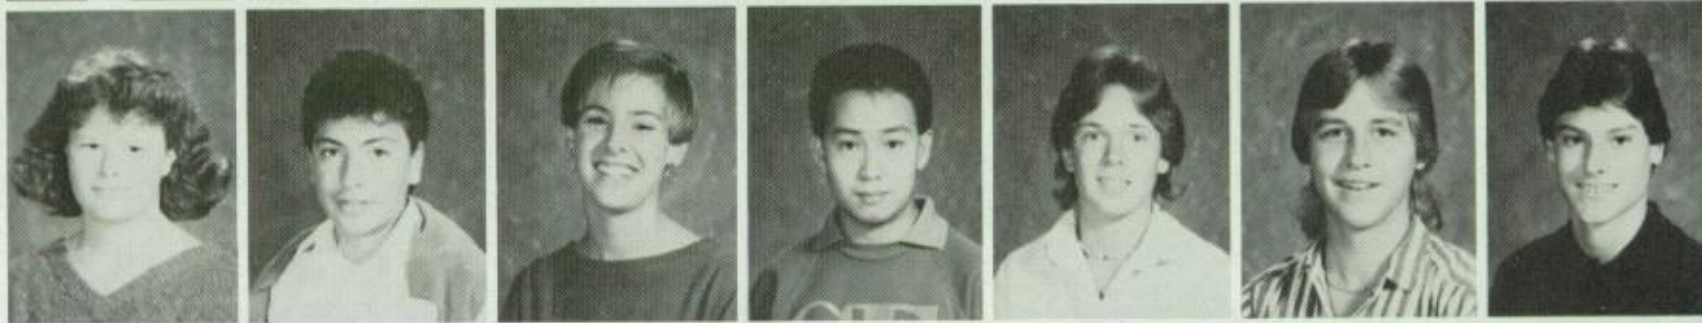

Picture this: You are laying out under a beach umbrella on the warm sand at Santa Cruz. You are listening to "Louie Louie" as many friends lay back and roast a Leland Charger over a roaring bonfire. Such was the sophomore presentation of the Homecoming theme, Pioneer Life.

After hours of hard work, the sophomores produced a spectacular float this year. All those involved worked hard and diligently on the float. Their reward was a fourth place finish in the Homecoming float contest and, of course, a lot of fun! The float was an enjoyable experience for all, and, according to Dave Harris, sophomore class Vice-President, "Building and riding the Homecoming float was a rather nifty experience."

WHAT IS

The Definition Of A Sophomore?

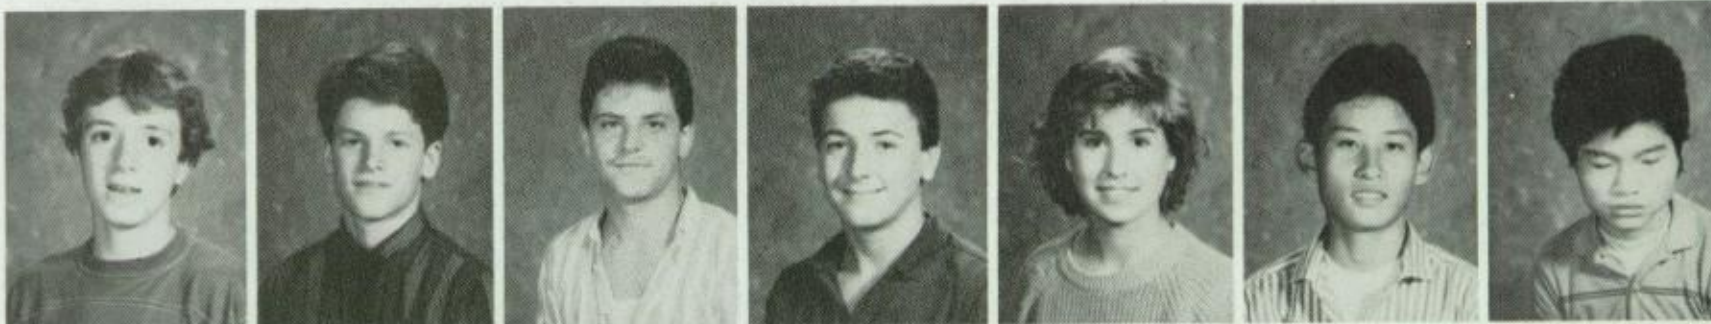

As defined by Webster's Dictionary, a sophomore is a student in the tenth grade at high school. However, the students here at Pioneer have given new meaning to the word sophomore. The Pioneer student body had many different answers to the question: What is a sophomore?

... a wise fool.
... an old freshman.
... a young junior.
... a freshman who knows his way around school.
... a dog with no bone.
... a sophomore is merely a "Bridge" that a student must cross in making the transition from a lowly freshman to the wild life of an Upperclassman.
... a bowl of Jello with a big hole in the middle.

you sit up straight and act as though you know what the class has been doing. As you read your text book, you notice that the earth's gravitational pull is stronger, and your head keeps slowly falling toward your desk. You attempt to fight this force and sit up straight, but your head starts to slip on the seat. So you put your elbow on the table and set your chin in your hands. Now that ought to do it! But then your eyelids, in slow motion, close halfway and open again; they keep repeating this process until your elbow starts to slip and causes your head to jerk. You give in to this force; you then set your head in your hands on top of your desk pretending to write with the pencil you hold in your hand. You drift away into sleep (hoping to God that you don't drool). You finally fall asleep. The violent scream of the passing bell awakens you. You pick up your books and cram your papers into your backpack, get up and proceed to your next class only to repeat the all-to-well-known cycle all over again.

FLIPPED OUT

She's One Of The Elite

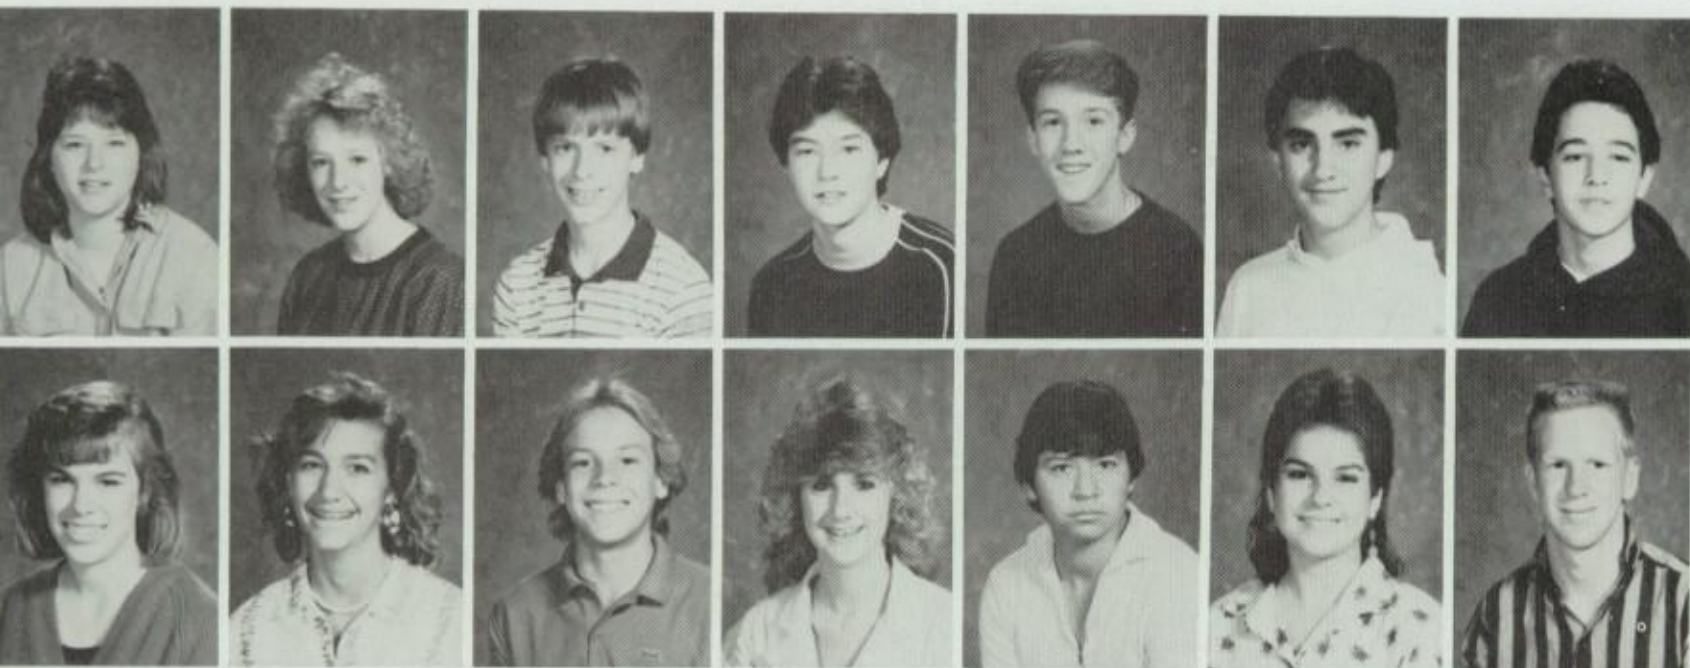

Jodi Solod is one truly outstanding sophomore. Since she was six years old, Jodi has dedicated her life to gymnastics. After a long, hard day at school, Jodi's day is not over. For, right after school, she practices at the Almaden Valley Gymnastics Club for four tough hours. After a long day, she arrives home around 7:15 P.M. However, Jodi does not neglect her school work. She has, in spite of the time and effort that gymnastics takes from her, maintained a 3.0 grade point average.

Jodi has competed in numerous meets all over the United States. She has traveled to Hawaii, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, Idaho, and all over California for various meets. In these meets, she has often placed in the top six in all events. These events include floor, bars, beam, vault, and all around. Last year, at one Utah meet, she made elite. This means that she earned the privilege of competing against some of the best and most talented gymnasts in the nation. Jodi is currently ranked number thirty-four in the United States.

Jodi says, "I hope to make the U.S.A. National Gymnastics Team." She also comments, "I also wish to be in the 1988 Olympics." With her talent, dedication, and hard work, she has a very good chance to achieve both of these goals. Jodi Solod is truly an outstanding sophomore.

Jodi shows her stuff at a meet in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Big Brother Is Watching You!

What do freshmen really think about having an older family member at the same school? To find out, we interviewed the following freshman: David Burke, Missy Maloata, Renee Kremer, and Joanne Hufferd.

RELATIVELY SPEAKING

MOVING UP?

The Start Of Something Big

From the top to the bottom is the transition of every freshman from junior high to high school. The year before the freshman were what was hot. Why? Because they were in eighth grade and in junior high and there they were top dog, head honcho, numero uno, etc. They were the ones setting the trends, pulling the pranks, "ripping" on the younger students, cutting in lunch lines, and were considered the "cool" people on campus. The eighth graders were proud of their status. They were finally on top. It had been three years since they had bullied anyone, and they felt they had earned it. Now no one was going to push them around. It was their turn this time. The sixth and seventh graders were in awe of the eighth graders. To think that next year they would be in high school with the real "bigshots." People who drove to school in their own cars, had school dances that lasted until eleven o'clock, cut classes to go to the beach, and had parties with guys and girls without parents present. The eighth graders were well aware of this. They had heard stories from their older brothers and sisters and were anxious to get to high school.

Summer was now officially over, school had begun. The eighth graders (now freshmen) were welcomed with an orientation just for them. But when school was finally in session, they noticed everything was not a bed of roses. It was more like a bed of thorns! They were put in some classes with upperclassmen who didn't speak to them. Now they (the freshmen) were the ones who were following the trends, watching upperclassmen pull pranks, being "whaled" on by the seniors, being pushed out of lunch lines, and being considered the "Freddy Freshman." It was a complete turnaround. Everything they did to the sixth and seventh graders was being done to them. But don't fret, little freshmen, it only lasts a year, everyone goes through it. It's sort of an initiation into high school. Next year will be better, you'll be sophomores and you'll watch next year's freshmen squirm as you did.

FIRST DATE

A Dilemma For Freshman Boys . . .

The first year of high school is always the worst socially, especially for boys. They have finally reached the state of being interested in the opposite sex, but how are they supposed to make themselves interesting? This is known as the freshman boys' lament, too old for "Cops and Robbers," yet too young to play the "Dating Game."

First, there is the problem of persuading the girl to go out with him. Freshman girls are usually attracted to the 'classy' upperclassmen, juniors and seniors. These guys have their license, a car, a job with their own income, and they are more developed and advanced than the typical freshman. However, once the 'chosen one' has accepted an invitation, the problem is fulfilling the obligation. How can a freshman keep a girl interested in himself when he has no way of impressing her and winning her affections? The typical freshman boy has only one form of transportation, M-O-M-M-Y. With no car and no license the freshman must be chauffeured all over town with his date. To make matters worse, Mom always confirms the ten o'clock curfew and make sure she did not forget to give her 'baby' enough money, right in front of the date. Is there any possible way to solve these problems? The answer to that, all you freshmen, is no. One must simply let nature and age take its course. Remember all those juniors and seniors were once freshmen, too!

Erin MacCool waits patiently as her friends Mike Brown and Annie Cisneros make plans for their date for Saturday night.

IT'S FRESH

The Price You Have To Pay

Nothing is more frightening than the first day of school for a high school freshman. A random survey gave the following as the most common freshman fears:

- *Fitting in
- *Getting lost
- *Tripping over his shoelace in the quad
- *Getting used to the new high school environment
- *Getting good grades
- *Falling asleep in class
- *Finding his way around the campus
- *Being called to the office
- *Being the only "freshman" in class
- *Giving speeches in front of the entire class
- *Slipping and falling in front of the senior bench
- *Being a loner
- *Being tardy to class
- *Having to admit to being a Freshman

- *Not being in style
- *Sneezing in class and have to blow his nose, especially during an exam
- *Looking bad at school
- *Being thrown into the garbage can by the older kids
- *Getting duct taped to a pole
- *Taking finals
- *Losing his cool in front of the opposite sex
- *Having to have his parents provide the transportation for a date, or asking the person out in the first place!
- *Senior pranks
- *Being called upon in class when not paying attention
- *Being separated from friends

Usually, a freshman finds that all his fears are groundless, and his first year in the big jungle of high school is fun and exciting.

HELP!

Mr. Stark showing the effect freshmen have on him!!!!

A Day In The Life Of A Freshman Teacher

Dear Diary,

Today was one of the most interesting days I've ever had at school. Teaching a freshman class has to be one of the best jobs anyone could ever have! When the bell rang this morning, almost everyone was sitting in their seats ready to learn. If there's one thing I've learned in all my years of teaching ... it's that freshman will always be to class on time — unless something unexpected happens. George ran through the door this morning three seconds late. He pleaded with me to not mark him tardy, saying that he had lost his key to his bike lock. I asked him if he has found his key and George replied: "Yeah, I searched all my pockets for it until I remembered I had it taped to the inside of my shoe." I was trying my best to conceal my laughter when the room was suddenly filled with a putrid odor. I looked up from my desk and saw Freddie quietly walk to his seat as if nothing were the matter. When some of the other students noted his unusual fragrance, Freddie said that he was taking out the garbage at home when he accidentally spilled some on himself. Of course, we all know what had really happened to Freddie, he had been trashed. A group of upperclassmen probably saw Freddie on his way to class by himself and decided to throw him in a garbage can. Gosh, I really felt sorry for the poor kid.!

When the class had finally settled down, I was ready to begin teaching. The first thing I did was collect the homework. Everyone turned in their assignments except for Tommy, who claimed he did it but left it at home. You'd think he'd be able to think of a better excuse than that! Oh well, freshmen will be freshmen!

It was finally time for me to give the class their test. One good thing about a test is that it's the only thing that will keep a freshman class quiet. While the class was diligently working, I looked up from my desk, noticing what an unusual group of people I had before me. Everyone had different styles, acted in different ways, trying their best to "fit-in" with everyone else. I wondered if these kids would ever make it in the real world!?!

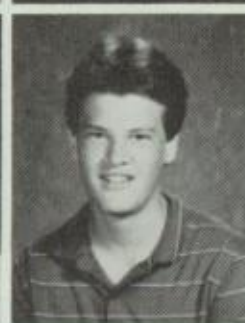

When the bell finally was about to ring, I collected the tests from everyone. I looked them over and to my surprise the grades were actually pretty good. All my worries were over. From my experience this morning, I concluded that the freshman year is a difficult time in a student's life, an obstacle that stands between them and their future years. Although freshmen often seem strange and peculiar, underneath all that wierdness they really are decent people.

Different

Teachers do so much more than what we students realize. They not only spend hours each day in the classroom teaching, but are willing to give up their lunchtimes or afternoons to help a student with a special problem. They also advise clubs, classes, activities, and coach sports, which all require countless hours above and beyond the call of duty.

Teachers on break! Mr. Foletta relaxes with a can of diet coke while Mrs. Meyers wonders, "What's for lunch?"

Bubba: Quality And Quantity

What's the first thing you think of when you hear two hundred ninety pounds? A lion? A bear? A wild mustang? Well, this Mustang is not an animal; it's Andy Maloata, who most students affectionately refer to as Bubba. Bubba, number seventy-one defensive and offensive tackle on varsity football, drinks approximately one-half gallon of milk a day and eats twice as much as an average All-American senior.

Bubba was asked how it felt to be the largest player on the team. "I feel like any other player, and it really isn't the size that makes you a good player. It's that you are willing to learn. If you don't have that, you shouldn't even go out for the team."

Bubba started playing football when he was a mere child of thirteen. The colossal senior plans to continue his football career in college, and his 3.0 G.P.A. should help him achieve his dream ...

The team record of three wins and seven losses was dismal and unexpected. "We have one of the most talented teams in the district, but we're lacking in organization," said our gargantuan tackle, Bubba. Even so, the following were recognized as outstanding players: Most Valuable Player- Dave Hoffmann, Outstanding Back- Larry Laform, Outstanding Lineman- Darrin Denson, Outstanding Lineman- Bubba, Outstanding Offensive- Troy Marseline, Outstanding Defensive- Dave Hoffman, Most Inspirational- Scott Tenczar, Most Improved- Eric Martin, Coaches Award- Adam Schwenker, Co-captain- Dave Hoffmann, and Co-captain- Troy Marseline.

CATCHING THE

Not All

Fun And Games...

During the third week of August, approximately 55 young men began to dread the infamous "double days" work-outs that began the frosh/soph football season.

The agony began on August 23, 1986, when the frosh/soph football players rambled onto the field at 7:45 a.m.

Each group of players then went to a different section of the field. The linebackers and linemen went to "the sled." The defensive backs ran through drills and also practiced patterns with the wide receivers (whose task was to practice catching). The running backs did running plays with the quarterback. The quarterback also warmed up, and threw passes to wide receivers.

After performing these excruciating, and literally, "breath-taking" tasks, they left for home at 12:00.

At home, the players tried the best they could to ignore the incredible pain they felt. If possible, they tried to sleep, and get a bite of food down.

Trampling back onto the field at 3:00 p.m., the frosh/soph players were ready to run. Running and sprinting until 6:00 p.m., the guys were on the verge of collapsing. The coaches dismissed them until the next morning.

This old-time ritual, known as double days, served the purpose of conditioning the Pioneer Mustangs for the oncoming football season. These drills were dreaded by all, but enabled them to have a victorious season of 7:3.

"We did everything as a team, to teach the freshmen how to play the game. The freshmen this year learned very, very fast. They were learning Varsity plays by the end of practice." -Jeff Garvais

"It was very tiring, but we learned a lot. Double days week had to be the longest week of my life." -James Rodda

"The sophomores were cruel! But we learned a lot. As far as a description of double days? It was pure hell!" -Michael Burnham

"The first couple of days weren't all that bad, but then, waking up early, and being there at 7:45 in the morning was the pits. It paid off though, with our final outcome of 7:3." -Jason Guardino

Back By Popular Demand...

What do you get when you take one experienced, enthusiastic coach (a 1960 Olympic gold-medal winner in swimming), a revived sport, and 14 spirited, ready-to-work team members? A winning waterpolo team? Maybe, CCS champions? Not quite! At least not this season. Even though the waterpolo team had all these fabulous "points of magnificence" going for them, they still lacked one thing. That one important thing that could take them all the way to the top-experience!

It was once said that experience could make or break any team. No one could say these guys did not try. They practiced every other morning at 6:00 and every afternoon at 4:00, trying to make up for the three year experience difference between them and the other waterpolo teams. Jason Yosso said, "Morning workouts were cold, dark, and terrible, but were definitely necessary." Although most workouts were far from pleasant, it did not stop this team from being one of the most spirited ones at school. When the team was down from losing and did not feel like doing much of anything, there were always those three or four guys who could get the whole team up and rarin' to go.

Even after those torturous workouts, these guys managed to have fun. In fact, it became tradition for them to bring their bowls and favorite cereal for post meet breakfasts in the quad. A bunch of all around guys, the H₂O polo team is the one to keep your eyes on next season.

Green D. Matano: (6-3)(6-4)

Erin Green defeated Tracy Matano 6-3, 6-4, picking right up where her sister Lisa, left off. It was supposed to have been a cakewalk for Leland's number one player, but such was not the case.

So what's the big deal? Well, it was the first time in her life that Erin had beaten Tracy out of "eleven or twelve" previous matches. (It also saved Pioneer from a 0-7 embarrassment). "I hate Leland," she said, when asked about some of her reactions, "... they clap every time I miss."

"I just wanted to play well ... to make it close," she responded when asked how she felt before the match. During the match, she did play well, and proceeded to take the first set 6-3. On the penultimate point of the match, Erin hit an under-handed drop serve. SURPRISE! Tracy "didn't even get to it."

A well-played match point was very indicative of the two excellent players, who tied for second place in the STAL: A long rally of approximately twenty groundstrokes, then the "out!" call, then the handshake. How did you feel after it was all over, Erin?

"Happy ... I was, like, in shock. I couldn't believe it."

THEY'RE JUST

Time Flies When You're Having Fun

"I'm really glad I started playing. It's really fun, and the people are great. We had a rad season last year, and it's something I'll never, ever forget." -Christina Paganini

This statement was said by one of the senior players on the girls varsity volleyball team. It expresses the sentiments felt by the graduating players on the team. The volleyball team had always seemed more like a close-knit family than a team forced to cooperate at all times. As junior Anna Sondeno said, "The friendship of every player is very special to me." It was the special comraderie that developed among the players which led to the success of the team.

Following up their S.T.A.L. Championship win last year, the varsity team had another triumphant season. The highlight of the season, in their opinion, was their victory against rival Gunderson. The most critical factor to the success of the season was due to the hard work of the players. Starting in August, they practiced daily for three hours. In their case, practice did make perfect! Their coach, Norma Hammons, was also vital to the success of the team. She even boosted the morale of the team by bringing them pizza before each game!

The junior varsity team had a good season in spite of their lack of returning players. With a new coach, Jennifer Klinek, and an almost all-freshman team, the junior varsity team had its problems, with only two wins in league play. However, next year, with the return of many players, the team should be a major force in the S.T.A.L.

Run To Live Live To Run

We started the season
A very small team-
Ready for anything,
We were strong, tough and lean.

We did intervals at Vasona,
And ran on the track.
We always looked forward-
Nothing held us back.

Our races were held
At ole Hellyer Park
We trained hard for these races
Often running till dark.

The "Hellyer Hill" was the worst,
It tested our will,
But we knew somehow
That Pioneer would kill.

The bus rides to Hellyer
Were never a bore-
We provided entertainment
By having "Rip Wars."

At the meets we had fun
No matter what anyone would say.
We'd run and we'd conquer
And then we would play!

We ran on the weekends
At invitationals galore-
From Stanford to Soquel
We always did more.

League Finals came
And off we went-
We had suffered a lot,
But our spirits weren't bent.

Our guys did fantastic
Our girls sensational,
And five of our best
Went on to Regionals.

We did whatever
We knew it would take,
And that's what made
Pioneer X-Country so great.

Victory Without Applause . . .

Rodney Dangerfield and Pioneer's varsity girls basketball team have one thing in common—neither of them get much respect. But at least people go to see Rodney. The basketball team was lucky if anyone besides their families decided to attend their games. The reasons behind such an oversight by Pioneer students was a mystery to the team and their small group of backers. It simply wasn't the "hip" thing to do. Debbie Teixeira, when asked if she thought if a crowd would have made a difference, replied, "A crowd would have given the gym an aura of a championship competition, thereby having enhanced our playing considerably." It couldn't be because they were not good. On the contrary, they have gone to C.C.S. for three years in a row now, and have been the S.T.A.L. champions twice in the past three years.

They've gone to the C.C.S. semi-finals for two years in a row, and were once again this year a dominant force in the S.T.A.L. So what was the deal? Were they unexciting? No, basketball is a very exciting game, and the 30-second rule makes it more intense. This rule allows only 30 seconds for a player to take a shot at the hoop. Perhaps the reason lay behind the fact that people simply weren't aware of the games. Cheerleaders didn't go to the games; therefore, the spirit squad did not promote the games. The team itself couldn't very well force people to go to their games although they surely tried. Perhaps with a little more promotion and recognition the girls basketball team would have received the attention and respect they deserved. So next year, when you're sitting around with absolutely nothing to do, think about going to a girls basketball game. Your spirit and enthusiasm can surely give the girls that winning edge!

It's Not All Glamour...

The varsity basketball team had a successful season. The team consisted of nine talented players: Ray Gibson (starting forward), Dave Hoffmann (starting forward), Andre Brooks (starting guard), Lamel Harris (starting guard), Blair Sampson (starting center), Chris Moore (center), Rodd Abad (guard), Andy Maloata (center), and Dan Nichols (forward). Each of these players contributed to the skillful, flashy plays that pulled the team through each game. However, basketball was not all glamour. There was a lot of hard work behind the scenes. Two of the outstanding players, Andre Brooks and Ray Gibson, told of the long, tedious hours spent practicing six days a week, two hours a day to perfect their moves. During the practices, the players worked on such drills as shooting and free throws.

They also practiced on their offensive plays, game situations, and reviewed the previous games on video to see what needed to be improved or changed. They ended with a quick game of cut throat. Andre, a three year varsity player, said the team, with a lot of hard work, built up Pioneer's basketball reputation in his sophomore year, and maintained it through his senior year. Ray, a two year varsity player, felt that they had a lot of young players, but they were a strong team. Both agreed that the entire team was serious about the sport and the practices paid off. Ray also stated that Coach Seandel had a lot to do with the team's success: "He was a good coach, the best I've ever been coached by." Although they began slowly, they ended with a eighteen and eight record. Their coach, Steve Seandel, felt that the team showed a lot of dedication and improvement throughout the season. The players did an excellent job.

Freshman Guy Kitagawa "has a lot of potential," according to boys J.V. basketball coach Mr. Buller. He averaged 14 points, 5 assists, and 3 steals per league game. Coach Buller also calls him "the team leader."

"I'm pretty much the team leader," he said.

"Do you expect to play on the Varsity squad next year?"

"I hope so."

"What did you think of this year's team?"

"We played well as a team."

He also mentions that the team displayed a lot of unity and played very

So Much Talent

Coach Ayala thinks "they're out to get us." There is so much talent that they lost to Gunderson by a mere three points in the final three minutes. (Gunderson was "the team to beat this year.") There is so much talent ... this is starting to get monotonous!

With such talented players like M.V.P. Gina Guardino, most improved player Becky Huffman, and most improved player Kathy Schneider, the team was one that simply could not lose. There is a lot of hope and anticipation for next year, as well as a lot of talent.

"This year is not the varsity's year, it's the JV's year." This was the confident statement issued forth from the girls JV basketball coach, Lou Ayala. "The players are really talented ... and never give up."

There is so much talent, in fact, that Coach Ayala had "great difficulty" picking one individual that really stood out from the rest. There is so much talent that

"Everyone's out to get us... but we're not going to let anything come between us... (and victory)." -Coach Ayala

"No Guts No Glory"

Soccer-the sport seems innocent enough ... but is it? Few may realize this, but soccer can be quite a dangerous sport. Don't believe it? Well, any player on the girls teams could have told you that soccer injuries were not fun and games at all.

It seemed like almost all the girls were struck by the injury bug: Marvette Browning broke her foot, Tamara Beames broke her finger, Sheryl Uchiyama suffered a head concussion, Wendy Pomeroy popped a blood vessel in her leg, and Tracy Noriega had an inflamed hip joint ... Perhaps the most common injury was the "killer knee injury." When serious enough, it led to the end of a soccer career, as in Mary Sprowl's case. Mary reflected, "You never think it's gonna end, but when the big injury comes, the realization hits that it's finally over." Others who suffered from knee-itis were Jodi Major and Michelle Arnaudy.

Kim Mikelson, who had a jammed finger and a back injury gave us her own definition of an injury: "Picture this: you're stranded in the middle of the desert-you see the ice-cream man, you spend the last of your money on a double scoop of rocky road and suddenly ... as you're about to take that first luscious lick, the ice cream falls "splat" in the sand. Yeah, that's it-that's kinda what injuries are like ..." How profound ...

Bruises were something that plagued everyone all season long-the girls were black and blue all over. Commented Maureen Mikelson, "That's why you never saw us wearing short skirts in the winter!"

So why did the girls put up with this misery? For love of the sport, that's why. Michelle Arnaudy explained it all: "Injuries are like someone slamming the door in your face when you finally reach the end of the tunnel ... I keep coming back to it because soccer is to me what water is to fish ..." How profound ...

"The girls met the demands... their attitudes were great and they were able to display the skills they're noted for." -Coach Nelson

Like Fine Wine . . . Improving With Age

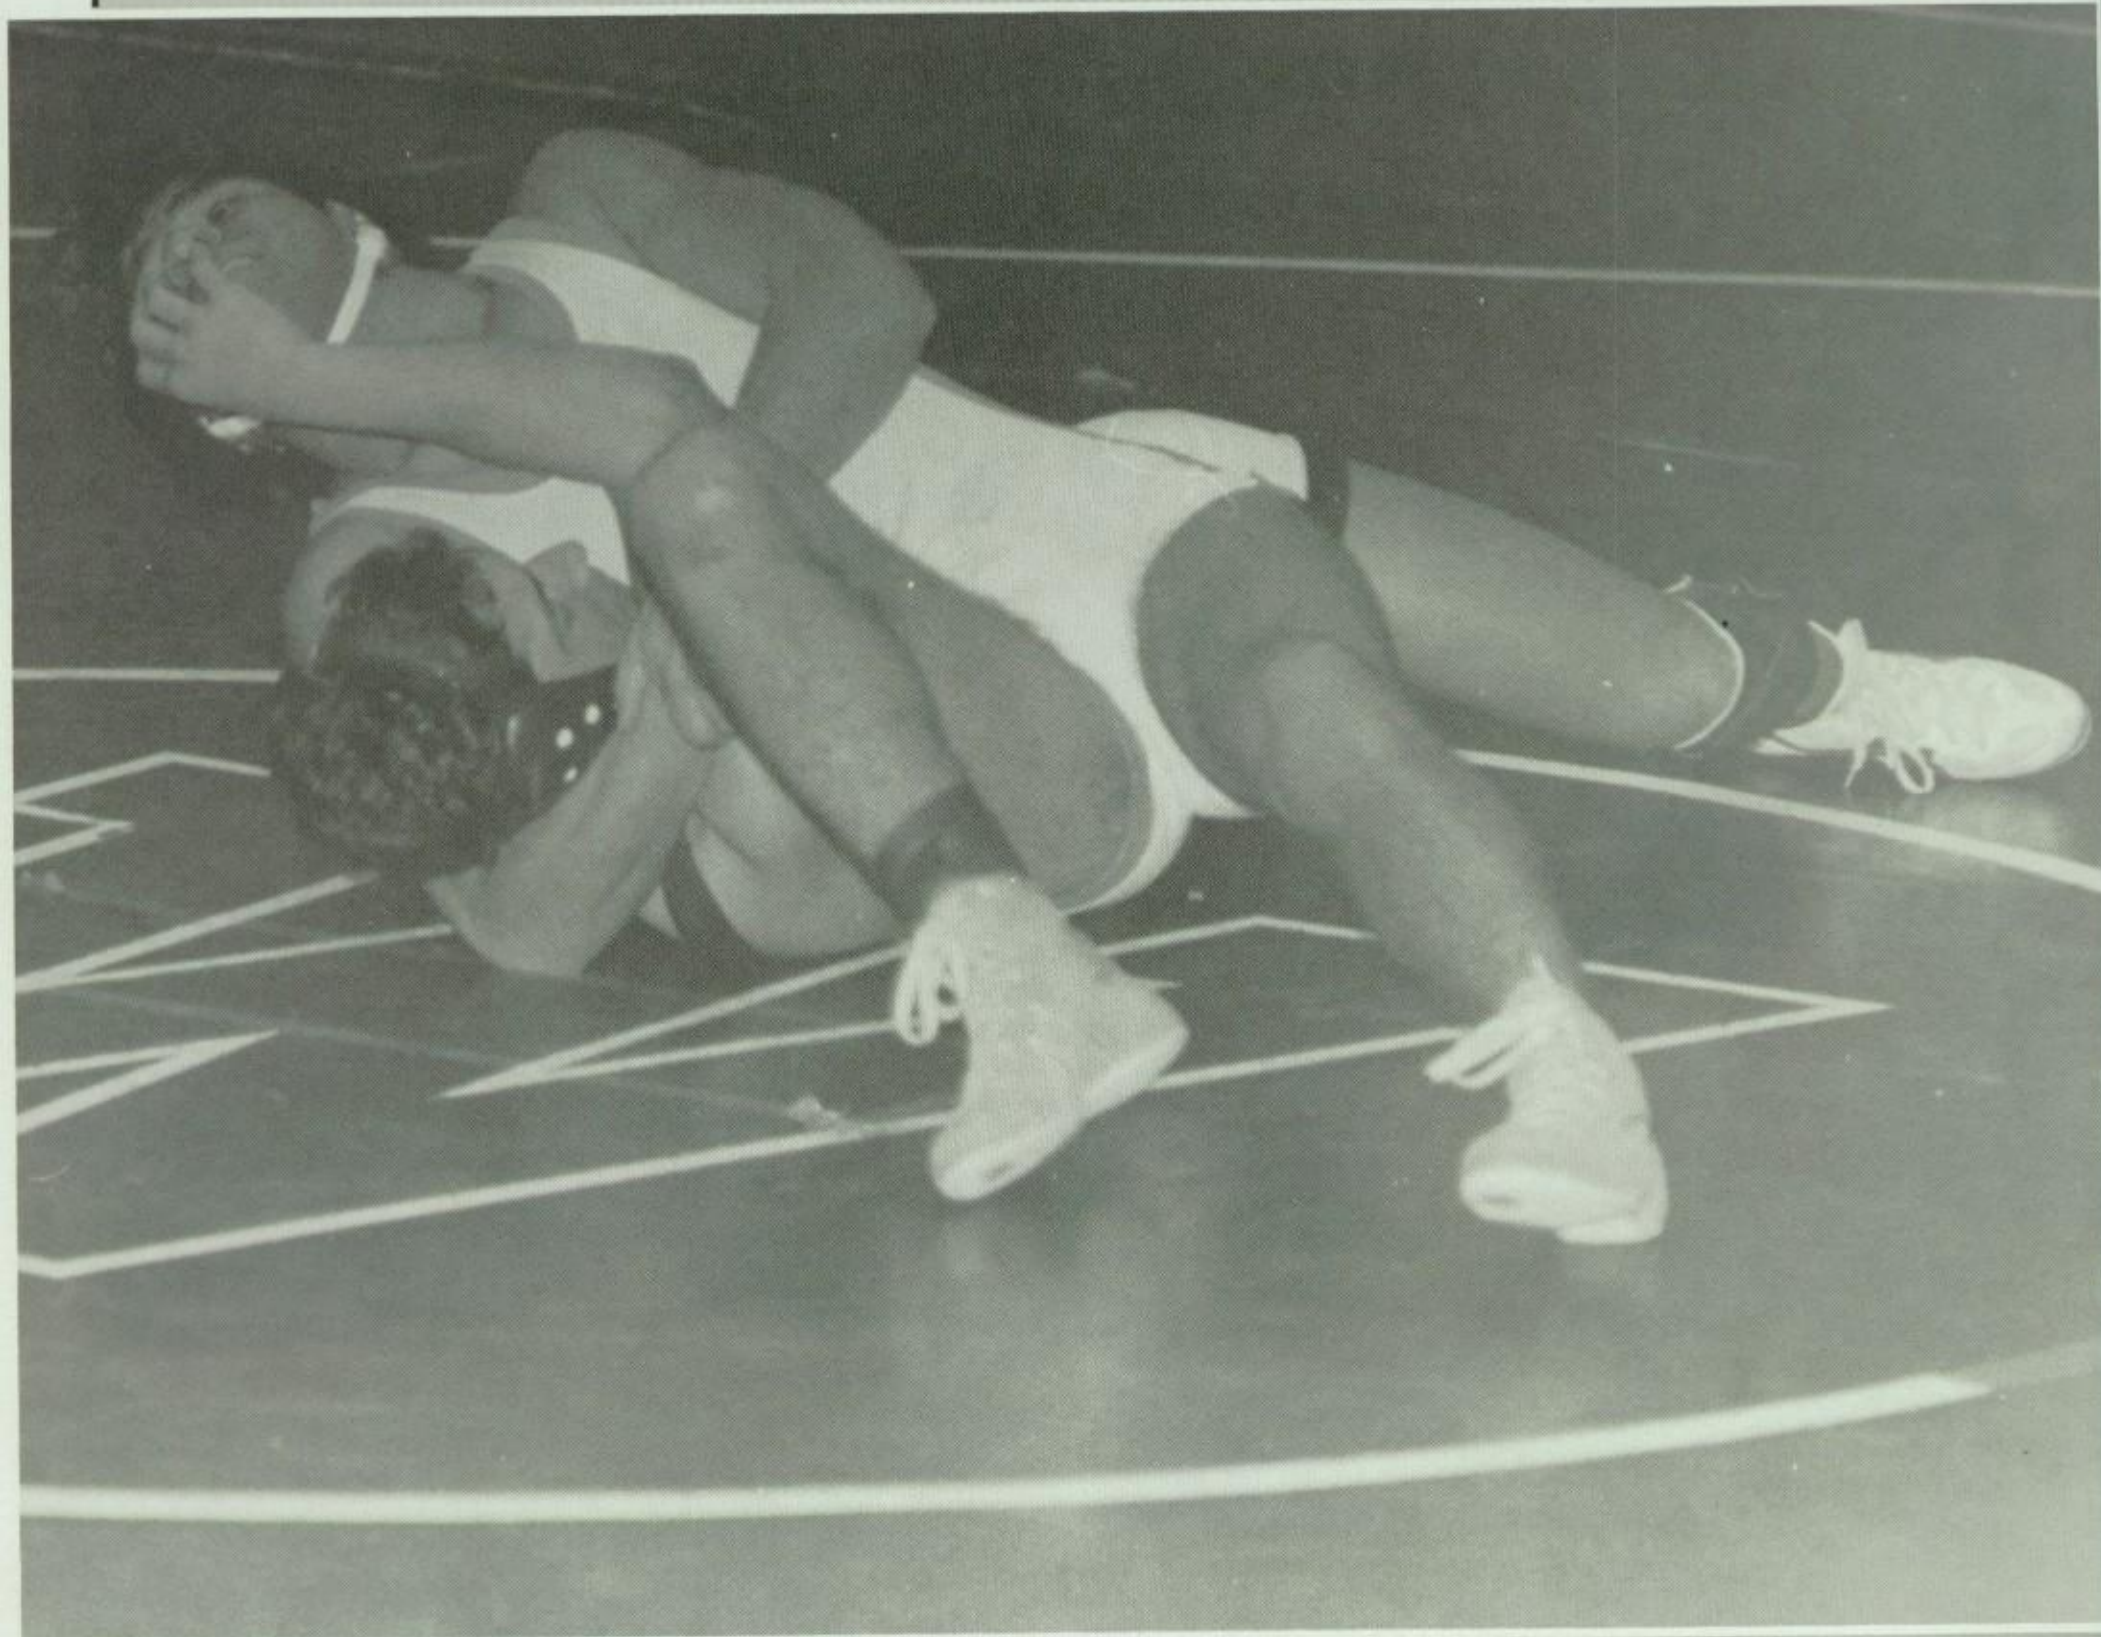

"Pioneer a good soccer team? Ha, don't make me choke on the crust on my P.B. & J." . . . That is what other schools were saying about the soccer program here at Pioneer since its birth in 1970. But this year the mood changed. Other teams were beginning to view Pioneer as a Santa Clara County soccer powerhouse. Everyone was saying "Yeah, can you believe it? Pioneer really seems to be the team to beat this year . . ."

Coach Oscar Mena began coaching at Pioneer in 1984 with one goal: to build the program up to Pioneer standards. He achieved this goal by fielding a young varsity team in 1986, and thus giving the team the experience needed to contend with the strong Santa Clara Valley teams. Under Oscar's guidance, the team rolled over opponents in pre-season play and ended up with a 5-2-2 pre-season record. This gave the team the needed confidence to make a bid at the STAL title as they entered league play. Senior co-captains Jeff Kison and Brent Fraser piloted the team into league play. Kison teamed up with third year varsity players, Gino Olivo and Scott Morris to provide the strength needed in the rough backfield, while returning goalkeepers Doug "Like a cat" Massa and his cat brother Jef Farro anchored down the goal. Forwards, Eric "Zippy" Zapata, Jim Bautista, and Brian Hilborn joined with midfielder Mike Guardino to contribute most of the goals. The team's first major accomplishment came early in the season when they surprised Gunderson with a 3-2 victory. However, they were unable to prevail over arch-rival Leland when Pioneer's 2-1 lead was tied on a Leland penalty kick late in the second half. "It's nice to see that the few wrestlers that we had turned out to be good wrestlers. We're sure to be successful in the future." - Andres Rodriguez

Yes, You Can Wear Tights And Still Be Tough!

Wrestling- it's been called "the most grueling of sports." Geez, that figures ... Practice was impossible today! The workouts take so much out of me and it hurts so bad. Why do I do it? In fact, why do so many guys go out for wrestling when it's so tough?

"A good wrestler has got to put all his heart into what he does." That's what the coach keeps telling us. He says a wrestler's motto should be "first you must condition, then you must learn technique, but lastly and most importantly, your whole heart must be put into wrestling." That's totally true-Can you think of any other sport in which an athlete will starve himself and not drink anything for two whole days, just so he can be at the proper weight? I see guys out there wrestling with cauliflower ears, broken bones, and fevers up to 104°! Yeah, this is a sport of "true men."

Wrestling has not only made me physically stronger, but I have seen so many inspirational things during my years of wrestling. I've seen athletes with no legs and hands, and even some blind kids out there, competing just as hard as everyone else. That is impressive! There is so much pressure put on a wrestler-you have to make weight, you have to compete in front of a crowd all alone, and you have to take on the responsibility of a loss all by yourself ...

Hmmmm, thinking things over now, I know exactly why I wrestle. No, it's not because I have a thing for pain and it's not because I'm crazy. It's a healthy, inspirational sport and besides, I'm doing it for Pioneer. It makes me proud to be able to say that, "I'm a wrestler-you know, the athletes with the biggest hearts!"

A Stroll Down Memory Lane

Pioneer's baseball team has been a major part of my life these last four years. I've spent many long days practicing in 90° weather, while my friends were at the beach, lying in the sun. Unfortunately, the rewards have been few and far between, especially the last two years. I still had fun playing, but I spent many sleepless nights wondering why we weren't winning. Well, much to my surprise and dismay, this year was no different. Although we had the talent to be a winning team, things just didn't work out.

A major reason why this year's team was different was because of a decision Coach Briscoe made two years ago. He decided to take five sophomores on varsity, an unheard of number. Derek Peterson, our starting catcher for three years, agreed that playing varsity as a sophomore helped him out for this year. I remember watching Chris Pankratz, and Darren Denson taking batting practice as sophomores, and thinking, "Man, wait until they're seniors." Well, the wait was over this season, and the experiment paid off.

In addition to the third year seniors, the team also had four other seniors that greatly contributed to the team. Jim Wisler made first team all-league last year and was our number one pitcher again this year. Returners Dan Nichols and Mike Craig also added much to our lineup. Ron Pearson was one of our top powerhitters as well as a successful pitcher.

Although there was a lot of talk about the seniors this year, our infield was made up of very talented juniors. Third baseman Rob McDonald, shorts Steve Bushaw, second baseman Dave Adams, and first baseman Mike Platt were the nucleus of our team this year and what I hope will be a successful team next year. Rob Thomas was also a productive player, both at the plate and in the outfield.

I have been playing baseball since I was eight, and like several other people on the team, it was most likely, my last year. I wonder what next summer is going to be like, without any knees to tape, sore arms to ice, or slumps to lose sleep over. It sounds strange, but I'm going to miss those aspects as well. It would've been nice to end my baseball years on a first place team, something I've never done. But regardless of how the team played, I can honestly say I've had some really fun times that I'll never forget.

"The Invisible Team"

Have you ever had the urge to do something "Different" almost outrageous, maybe kicking back in the sun without a lot of people around and watching girls in tight pants getting physical. Well the answer is not far away. In fact it's right here at Pioneer. Just go out one day and watch the girls Softball team in action. But don't let this get you wrong, softball isn't all it's cracked up to be. You could easily say softball is the black sheep of girls sports. Not meaning we have bad teams, but that most don't care if we even have a team at all. Some don't even realize we have a team. Softball players just don't get the credit they deserve. Have you been to one of their games lately? Probably not! Why not? They're just as good as the boys team if not better. With the excellent teams we have this year it's hard to figure why no one goes.

Keep in mind this years team just didn't get good on it's own. A lot of hard work from both the players and coaches Ayala and Bruno went in to it. The teams, for 3½ hours a day, practiced catching, hitting, throwing, and batting if they weren't playing in a game that day already. Some think of it as just a game, but most agree that it's an art form you have to work at every day to perfection. It was even harder for the Varsity team considering Coach Bruno had no assistant. Plunge Into Action

Pioneer boys swim team had a promising season in the 1986-87 school year. Many of the swimmers had raw talent that the coach successfully cultivated into polished technique and form. They had participants in many events such as the 100 free, the 50 free, the relay, the 500 free, and the 200 medley. The latter two were the most hated events because they called for the hardest workout, and they took the most energy in the meets. Some of the workouts included pulling a buoy between their thighs to strengthen the upper body and then using kickboards to strengthen the lower body. The former three events were the most popular. Although they also required a hard practice, they were the last events in the meet, and they usually decided the outcome. An outstanding swimmer and participant in the relay as well as the despised 200 medley, Eric Blick, felt that there was more team effort and support this year for the relay, the last and most exciting event.

The swim meets had a new event this year; for the first time in many years, they had a diving team consisting of Tyler Woodside and Paul Swing. Just a few of the many dives they performed were the front one and a half, the reverse gainer, the reverse flip, the swan, jacknife, and back flips. Both worked hard and did an excellent job. They agreed that it was a "total cool event," and the twists were hardest to learn. On weekends these two dedicated guys worked out on the trampoline in order to perfect their moves. Assistant diving coach, Donelle Du Bois, said, "They came a long way in a short period of time." When all was said and done, the Pioneer boys swim team succeeded beyond their expectations.

Right On Track

To many people Track and Field is just a game, such as football, basketball or soccer. However, to those dedicated Mustangs who were on the Track team; Track was more than a game, it was a way of life. A way of life which had to be constantly honed and disciplined. Unlike a team sport, Track was an individual's sport; therefore he had to rely totally upon his ability. This allowed people of all shapes and sizes to find the event which they not only enjoyed but also excelled. Track and Field had a multitude of events to offer to an athlete who was willing to put forth the effort.

For the person who enjoyed running, the "track" aspect had a lot to offer. There were several races of varying distances such as the hundred yard dash, 220, 440, 880, and the one mile. The 110 and 330 hurdles, which were of varying heights, combined both running and jumping ability. Finally, the relays, considered by some the most exciting event, were made of teams of four runners, running a leg of the 4x100 or the one mile relay.

If running was not your cup of tea, then the "field" aspect of Track and Field also had many events to offer. First of all, the discus throw and the shot put, events that required great strength, both involved throwing an object for distance. The long jump and the triple jump were events that used great speed and strong legs to propel an athlete long distances. Unlike the other jumps, the high jump was accomplished by jumping over a bar at a set height using proper form. And last but not least, the pole vault. This event combined not only speed and endurance but also upper body strength.

"After two years, I feel we have a really solid track team. Both Coach Flores and I have really seen tremendous improvement in the returning athlete. I think that the Santa Teresa Athletic League now considers Pioneer a team to be reckoned with."

Some Healthy Competition

Contrary to popular belief, competition does not only cause headaches and stress. Rather, it causes magnificent individual performances as rivals try to outdo each other. Such was the cause on the boys tennis team of 1986-87.

An intense rivalry existed between Rick Nguyen, Ramsin Nasser, and Kevin Hwang for the top spot. Other rivalries existed, such as that between Dan Plaut-Dave Burke and John Musgrave-Andy Kreiser/Bret Schardt-Chris Green. The results were astonishing: Pioneer established its best pre-season record in years, going 5-2-1.

The first doubles team was constantly challenged, and such competition resulted in a 6-2 win-loss record for this team. Ramsin Nasser and Kevin Hwang also held excellent win-loss records.

The stiff competition for positions also strengthened the team by giving the members the "extra edge" during meets; thus Pioneer's first three victories were by narrow 4-3 margins. However, those victories were reversals from 3-4 losses the preceeding year.

During practice sessions, tension always ran high and tempers flared occasionally as upsets were scored and avenged. Nonetheless, it was this competition that bred tennis players hungry for victory.

Fact Vs. Myth

When someone mentions the word "badminton," what is the first thing that pops into your mind? "Tuff sport?" Be honest! "Wimpy! Wimpy! Wimpy!"

Banish all those ideas of it being an easy sport that doesn't require much effort. This is definitely a myth, and players seldom get the recognition that they deserve. But let the facts speak for themselves.

Badminton is a cardio-vascular sport. It is considered to be aeropolyester pant suits! Why don't you join a real team like . . . football!"

Well, the time has come to give them the recognition they deserve. This dedicated group, practiced with their coaches Steve Seandel and Bob Nelson, at least four days a week for a minimum of nine holes a day. Their first match was held on March 23. They lost by a mere 19 strokes. They also played Leland, Willow Glen, and Gunderson. It took a special kind of determination, dedication and drive to be a member of Pioneer's golf team. These guys deserve a round of applause.

Think to yourself honestly for a minute. Do you really know or care if we had a golf team on campus? I thought so. Yet ten faithful golfers practiced nearly every day this past spring sport season, perfecting their golf technique. AND WHAT DID THEY GET IN RETURN?

Different

Club? What is a club? Is it what cavemen used to use on their cave-wives to get them to behave? No, no, no, no, no. Is it a certain suit in a deck of cards? No, no, no, no, no. Is it a place you go to take aerobics, swim, play raquetball, and scam on the opposite sex? No, no, no, no, no. Is it the long stick you use in order to get that hole-in-one? No, no, no, no, no. Okay, in all honesty here, a club is basically a group of people with a common interest who get together to talk, perform community services, go on trips, and have a great time in the process!!

"Look Ma!! We're in 3-D!" shout these yearbook and journalism students while they wait in line to see Captain E-O at Disneyland during the yearbook and journalism convention in Anaheim.

Key Club

You Call This a Club?

Key Club. When one heard this, thoughts like, "What a bunch of rowdy and obnoxious guys!" probably immediately came to mind. Why wouldn't a person think this? Take a look at their group photo, not exactly a bunch of angels were they? Well hey, these guys might not have exactly looked like a bunch of do-gooders who were ready and willing to go out and help the community, but believe it or not, they were! You are probably asking yourself, "What exactly was it that this year's Key Club did to make them so special?" For starters, President Justin Du Bois was really hip on making this year's club the best it had ever been before, and he had a long list of things to be accomplished. The list started off with program sales. Members sold programs at all home and away football games for the small price of fifty cents each. These guys also built an outstanding float which was presented at this year's Homecoming Parade. The float had a "Wheel of Fortune" theme complete with a mock Pat Sajak and Vanna White. Definitely first place material guys! Club members also sold raffle tickets in order to help out the March of Dimes. These tickets sold for one dollar a piece and the big prize was a turkey. During the Christmas season, the guys were so full of cheer and goodwill that they even helped set up the "Christmas in the Park" which is held annually in downtown San Jose. This was a lot of hard work, but the guys admitted that it was worth it. One of the most charitable activities that the club participated in this year was when they helped to feed the needy at Martha's Kitchen, a place where underprivileged people go to eat.

Besides doing charitable events and community services, these guys also sponsored a school dance. The theme of this dance was, "The Motion Dance" and it was held early in March. As one can see, this year's Key Club members were a big help to the community, and they deserve a lot of respect. These guys should also be given credit for being able to accomplish so much and still manage to have fun in the process.

Speech and Debate

Watch Your Tongue!

Belonging to Speech and Debate is the opportunity to talk your mouths off, to visit exciting college campuses at tournaments, and to meet people from all over California.

In my three years of high school, Speech and Debate has been an important and challenging activity. It teaches competitors the techniques and art of public speaking.

There are various types of speeches that competitors can choose to participate in. Humorous and Dramatic Interpretations are published pieces of works that are memorized and acted out. Original Oratory explains a problem in society and presents a solution. Extemporaneous and Impromptu speeches are unprepared. For Extemporaneous, a person has a half of an hour to prepare for a five minute speech on a current event. Impromptu speeches are about such topics as current events, abstract words, or quotes. The Impromptu speaker has two minutes to prepare the speech. Expository speaking is done with visual aids and usually is an informative speech.

A typical out-of-town tournament takes place at a university such as U.C. Berkeley, or Cal Poly. Competitors arrive on Friday and check into their hotels. Friday night is usually spent staying up all night, talking, practicing speeches for the following day, and running from room to room and being caught by hotel managers and very upset speech coaches. Saturday morning competitors head for the university for a full day of speaking and listening, running around, and eating! The team then calls it a day at about 8:30. We then return to the hotel and spend the next six hours chatting with our friends about the "mess-ups," new friends, and college hunks. Sunday is spent basically the same way. This is the day when semi-finalists and finalists compete for the top. Then, an awards ceremony is held, where first, second, third, fourth, and fifth places are awarded.

After the ceremony, hundreds of tired speakers board the bus to return home. After about half of an hour, the bus quiets down and most of us are fast asleep! This is probably the only time you'll see a bus full of debaters with their mouths shut!

Through Speech, I have met some of the greatest, most interesting, and talented people. Speech has given me some of my best high school memories which will never be forgotten!! -Tina Lamberti

"Vamos a empezar . . ."

¡Bienvenido!
Cantos, fiestas, and much buen tiempos.
What comes to your mind?
Well, the Spanish Club should!!!

This past year one of the new clubs that was organized was the Spanish Club. Planning began in the summer with a successful car wash. Along with dues from the members they were able to put on a 'Bien' fiesta. There was food, drinks, and a pinata all accompanied by authentic Mexican music.

Since this was the first year for the club, they had to think about expenses before they could decide on activities. But that did not stop the officers from making it the best it could be. They continued with a joint pizza night at Round Table with the French Club, a cultural Cinco de Mayo fiesta, which included a live Mariachi band, and more car washes. They celebrated the end of the year with a traditional Mexican meal at El Torrito and a 'Bien' day at Great America.

Even though the officers were mainly on their own, they received a lot of encouragement from their advisor, Mrs. Artigas. She considered herself just a "warm body", but she gave them ideas and her support. "She's really spirited!" said Selina Quan.

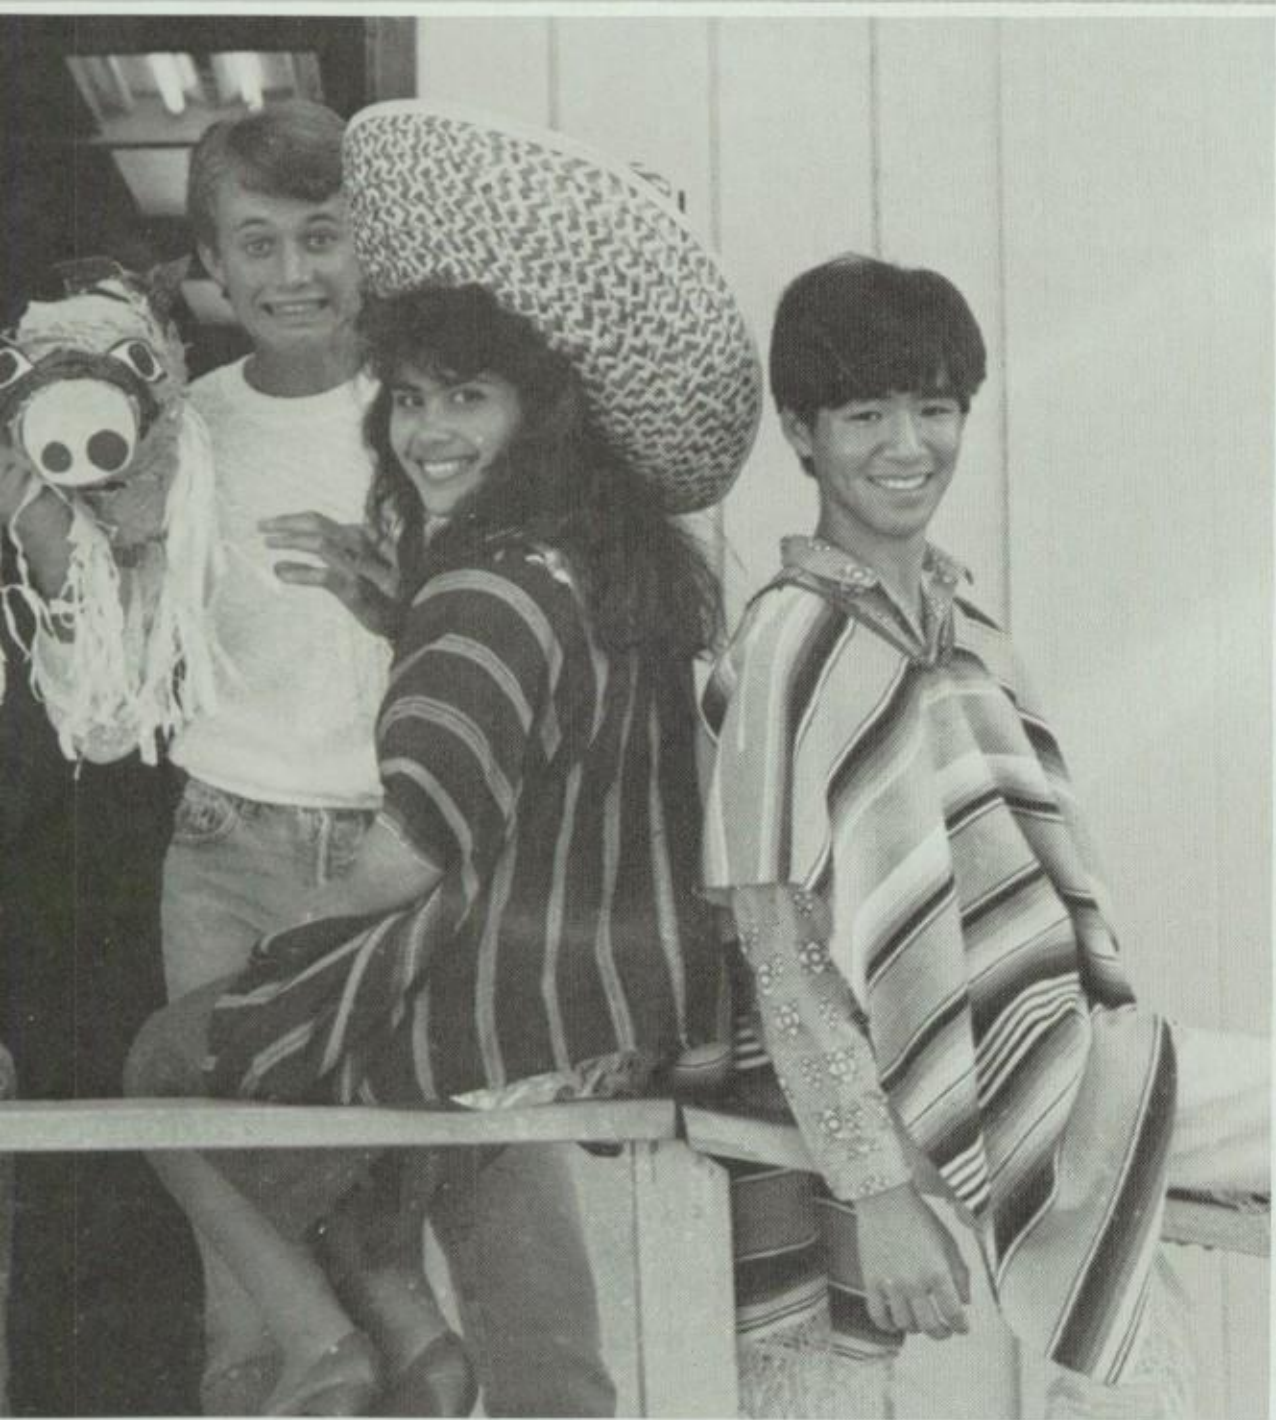

When asked about their first year president Dawn Johnson commented, "All I know is Selina and I wanted to start a club. We had a lot of plans for this year, but because we didn't have the funds to fall back on we couldn't do all we wanted to. But I hope everyone had as much fun as I did."

It Ain't All Cows and Plows!

Although it was not one of the more familiar clubs on campus this year, the Pioneer chapter of Future Farmers of America did a tremendous job of upholding the pride of Pioneer. It proved to be a very strong organization that took part in many activities. They spend a lot of their time attending various competitions and winning awards. The officers were Laura Kocina, president; Michelle Sando, vice-president; Wendy Pomeroy, reporter; Andy Stout, secretary; and Connie Dean, sentinel.

F.F.A. had a busy year. They started before most clubs by participating in the Santa Clara County Fair. They did exceptionally well in this competition, receiving the Chapter Poultry and Chapter Rabbit Awards. They also spent time raising their own animals, attending conventions (at regional, state, and national levels), having guest speakers and much more. In November Laura Kocina, Wendy Pomeroy and Michelle Sando represented Pioneer at a competition in Kansas City, Missouri. They truly "travelled far and wide to uphold the Pioneer pride." Of course it wasn't all work. F.F.A. members managed to have fun too. They met lots of new people at the competitions they attended, and for them, no matter how much work they had, what they did was fun. Our F.F.A. chapter is truly a club to be proud of and perhaps in the future, it will receive the recognition it deserves for its many accomplishments.

A New "Clique"

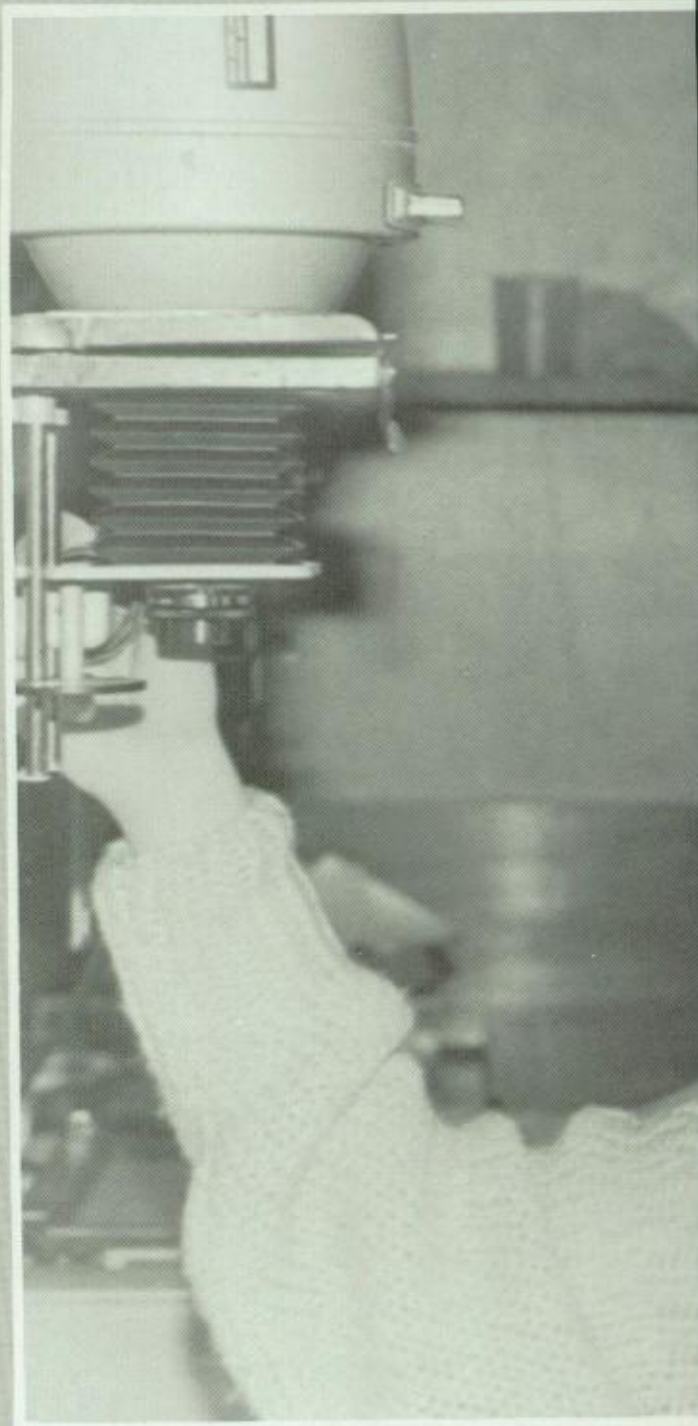

"Get that camera out of my face or I'll _____!" Does this ever happen to you while your trying to take a picture? Probably not. Not unless you happen to be a member of one of Pioneer's newest clubs; The Photo Club! You may ask, "Why take all that just for a picture?" If you were to ask a photo club member a common response would be, "For the Kodak contest!" Now we've answered why members will take pictures, but $What's the Kodak contest," you ask. It's what every member looks forward to, where they turn in their best pictures to a national contest, with categories ranging from black and white to color, and possibly win a $5000 scholarship. But that's not all there is to Photo Club. Like most clubs Photo Club holds regular meetings to talk about fund raisers and normal club "stuff". Photo Club is also much different than other clubs in the sense that most clubs don't try to meet four times a week, don't develop and print their own pictures, and don't help yearbook make most of their deadlines. In fact without Photo Club our yearbook wouldn't be half as great as it is!

"Holy Spumoni! Without Photo Club we'd be up yearbook creek without a cropper." - Ariadne Sarros

"Being in Photo Club was a great experince, meeting new people, learning new things, having a good time, all of those things were possible because of it. I wish Photo Club had been started sooner!" - Jenny Falkenhan

"Well Gee! Without Photo Club yearbook wouldn't have any pictures!" - Suzie Miller

"Very few people get to do what they like. I'm very lucky; I, through being the advisor for Photo Club, get to combine two things I love, photography and teaching. I've enjoyed sharing my knowledge and mistakes with such a talented group of young people." - Penny Pugh

Sculpture

Magical Hands

Have you ever seen a sculpture displayed in the library-media center and wondered "who made it?" Well, if your answer is "yes", keep on reading. If your answer is "no", read on and discover the wonderful world of sculpture. It might just be what you've always wanted to do to release the creative side of you and unscramble the frustrations you face in life.

The beautiful sculptures you see in the media center and the office are creations made by the hard working members of Mr. Donovan's 5th period sculpture class. You might think the class is all fun and games but that is not true. According to a very reliable source (Mr. Donovan), the class focuses on a lot of homework such as research. Then, the students must apply what they learned into projects such as the mask pictured on the next page.

The sculpture class deals in hands-on work with multi-media such as stone, wire and papier-mache. The class members try to solve different sculptural problems, such as how to make a life sized papier-mache sculpture stand on his hand, with different medias. The projects let the students learn team work. They must get to know each other so they can understand the other person's actions and creativity. Mr. Donovan said that it is amazing for him to see the students work so well together on a project because he doesn't have as much time as he wants to spend with the different groups.

When asked what he enjoys most about teaching, Mr. Donovan stated, "I enjoy watching my students' development as complete people through art." He also stated that he is happy to see so much talent and was able to help them develop their ideas. He was glad that he was able to apply what he had learned and pass it on to his students.

The sculpture classroom is not a playground but a place for self-discovery. The bright working room gives the students a very nice environment in which to work. The sculpture class is a place for one to discover his creativity and let it loose. It is a place for one to work out his own frustrations through art. After all, that's how Vincent Van Gogh got started.

B and

We've Got The Beat

Band was one of the many special interest groups at Pioneer. The band started last year after a seven year grace period. When Mr. De La Rosa first came to Pioneer and started the band, he had little cooperation from the students, but after much work he earned the respect of his starting band. "It has come a long way from the first day of school, in general. They are very good musicians, and I can only see continuing improvement in the years to come," said Mr. De La Rosa who chose the concert and Pep bands' literature, and allowed Jazz Band to pick their own. He has been a conductor for five years, and his responsibility was to pick literature which was interesting and educational. The band has performed five times this year: the Homecoming game, two season games, the Winter Concert, and the Spring Concert. The band has improved this year because there are fewer people than last year and the members were close and communicated well. The two most popular instruments in band were the flute and the trumpet. Two band members said band had improved greatly, because they had better music which they thought was more fun. Most of the students in band planned to be musicians after they graduated. One of the students interviewed wanted to be a drummer for the band called "Ready for the World." But other students said that they wouldn't be playing after high school. Most of the students practiced during lunch, and in their seventh period band class. Many students also took their instruments home to practice. Band was a special group of dedicated musicians who entertained the student body and were appreciated by all.

Different

It seems that nowadays everybody is doing everything to raise money. This ranges from car washes and selling candy to selling calendars and even selling ads. That's right, selling ads. The Equus and Misprint Staffs had to do the dirty work of calling up and going from store to store in hopes that one business might possibly buy an ad. Various clubs also took on the challenge of fund raisers. All of this selling was of course, for that one essential item, money.

Dawn Johnson, Selina Quan and Jessica Kitazawa show that fundraisers can be fun as well as profitable at the National Honor Society car wash.

Serving the Community for over 30 years,

Julie -

I really don't know what to say. I've known you since 3rd grade. You are, you have been, and you will always be my friend. I think that we've been thru alot. We went thru those years of growing up. And now we move on. I can't believe we're graduating from high school. Its been such a long time since those early years. I can't think of anything else to say. Be good, babe, and take care of yourself. If you have my number. Whenever you need anything or you want to talk to someone - USE IT!

COLOPHON

The 27th volume of the Pioneer High School Equus was published by the yearbook staff. The book was printed by the Jostens Printing and Publishing Co. in Visalia, California. The cover and contents of this book were designed by the staff.

Basic body type is 10 pt. Optima. Captions are 8 pt. Optima and headlines vary from section to section. The special section uses a variety of type sizes and styles throughout.

35 mm film was used for all the candid in the book. Freshmen, sophomore, and junior mugs were taken by Portrait World. The senior class pictures were taken by Nelson Photography.

The book's cover materials are litho 470 and the colors are black 395 with Berry Red T-246 and Turquoise T-326. The material used for the fly sheet over the first page is Velum 247. The rest of the yearbook was printed on glossy 80 lb. paper.

The two spot colours featured in the special section were Berry Red T-246 and Turquoise T-326. Lee Matsumoto and Shirley Choy designed the first and last pages of this section.

The titles in the intro and student life sections were hand-written by Shirley Choy. Other special graphics were done by Ariadne Sarros, Kevin Hwang, Lee Matsumoto, and Andy Woolley.

Special thanks go to Mr. Padilla and Penny Pugh Fraley for all their help with the photography. Also thank you to Jim and Steve Nelson, for the many candid they provided.

Beyond class time, approximately 300 plus hours were spent on this yearbook and it made the difference between looking good and looking great!!

NOW WASN'T THAT "COMPLETELY DIFFERENT"

Dear fellow students:

This yearbook has been in the makings from the end of last year. The staff's first approach to the yearbook was somewhat ordinary: a regular blue cover with a regular inside, nothing extraordinary, nothing too exciting. It suddenly dawned on us that we had the capability to create something out of the ordinary, something Pioneer students had never seen, something "completely different". We decided to use different for our theme for several reasons. As I have already mentioned, our goal was to create an original book, but there were other reasons for choosing it as well. There were physical changes at school, new eating facilities, larger snack bars, closed campus and a new landscape in the quad. Desegregation brought many new students and teachers to Pioneer and with them came new talent, new friends and a new perspective about life. More important than the tangible differences, however, were the intangible ones. Pioneer seemed to have a different and better attitude about things in general. At the risk of sounding melodramatic, I sensed a stronger sense of unity among Pioneer students this year than any year before. We looked out for each other and cared. Therefore, focusing on the school's differences seemed the ideal theme.

I would like to recognize some people who made this book happen. First, I give my special thanks to our advisor Mrs. Pugh. It was both our second year on the staff so we both learned a lot together. She kept me organized (most of the time) and helped us all with everything-often in her own spare time. Our yearbook representative, Jef Myers, who helped us get all the cool stuff and still remain in our budget range and also for keeping us laughing. A special thanks to my best friend and Assistant Editor, Suzie Miller. She helped me so much and even stuck by me in the "stress monster stage". A big thanks to Penny Pugh Fraley for helping us with the photography and just about anything else that needed to get done. Shirley Choy was the best graphics and sports Editor ever!! Jenny Falkenhan and Jeff Zaro also did a terrific job with the mugs. A thank you to Jim and Steve Nelson for taking all the senior portraits as well as many of the candid. Everyone else on the staff also gets my thanks for doing so much-(I'd mention you all by name but this is sounding like a boring Academy Award Speech). Oh- also a thank you to Mr. Shellman for your tolerance.

If you forget all your highschool memories, forget about this book, or lose touch with friends, please remember one thing- to us, you made the difference because the difference was you.

Hey Sen,

We are finally out of High School. It's to bad you are not going to Hawaii, but I'm sure you will have fun at your sisters.
I know we will see
each other during the summer if you don't get married to Marty first. We better go out some time. Well
I want see you at school, but you better keep in touch. You always make me laugh.
Marty better be treating you good or just give me a call and I will straighten him
out. Don't forget about me.

Love ya,
Kelly

Julie: Hey honey, well you're finally out 4→ that's rad, but sad. I hope you still keep in touch w/ me, the little Junior. I remember the Sadies, that was fun & I'm glad we became close friends. It meant a lot to me & I know
I can always turn to you when I need to talk.
I hope you feel the same!! you & Martin are special, and I hope you guys don't drift apart through the years ahead. Keep smiling & don't ever change your caring personality. I'll think of you a lot & never forget our friendship. I hope we can go out this summer & I hope you come visit me!!
Have the Best Summer yet & good luck
4→ in the future!!

Julie,
 Can you believe we're finally seniors!
 It took us long enough to get here - but it was worth the wait. You're a real fantastic girl although there are some things I still wonder about you. For example (the laugh, our day to day conversations and so much more.
 The best of luck to you & Martin always and please keep in touch. See ya on "Grad Night".
